

ELEVEN CITIES SEEK G. O. P. MEETING

M'NARY-HAUGEN BILL GAINS FAVOR AGAIN

PENDULUM OF FARM RELIEF SENTIMENT ON BACKWARD SWING

Farm Leaders Would Pass Plan Over Coolidge Veto

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The farm relief pendulum, after swinging toward several substitute plans, turned back today to the McNary-Haugen bill, with farm leaders predicting its enactment into law even over a presidential veto.

Although several other plans for financing surplus crops have been considered at a series of farm conferences during the past month, the agricultural spokesmen here apparently have reinstated the old equalization fee as the basis of farm relief legislation. The McNary-Haugen bill, it was said, will be reintroduced in both house and senate as soon as congress reconvenes and it will feature the equalization fee.

The preponderance of opinion among farm leaders leaned toward early enactment of the bill, including the equalization fee. They even boasted that the bill probably would be enacted over a presidential veto although this was not attempted a year ago when Mr. Coolidge disapproved an identical bill.

The farm leaders, however, declared there has been a change of heart on the part of some western and southern opponents of the equalization fee as a result of conferences with the "people back home."

They maintained there will be enough votes in the seventieth congress to put the bill on the statute books, regardless of presidential disapproval.

Based on the Jardine plan of government credits, this plan would establish huge credits for farmer's cooperatives, by which the farmers could hold their surplus crops off the world market until favorable prices were obtained. The congressional leaders thought will oppose this plan and expect to defeat it.

"I feel certain the McNary-Haugen bill will pass by a greater majority than before," Senator Watson (R) of Ind., predicted. "If the president vetoes it, I rather expect congress will enact it into law over his veto."

Leaders of the insurgent bloc held the same view.

"If the McNary-Haugen bill is reintroduced and it contains the equalization fee," observed Senator Norris (R) of Neb., insurgent leader, "I expect it will be enacted."

RITCHIE NOT AFTER 1928 NOMINATION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, is not an active candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination next year. He is for Gov. Al Smith of New York.

The Maryland executive made that clear in an address here last night before the Catholic Charities Convention, after Archbishop Curley had introduced him as "one of the outstanding men of the nation," and another speaker had mentioned him as "an ideal standard bearer for the Democrats in 1928."

"While I appreciate the compliment implied by associating my name with the high office of the presidency," said Gov. Ritchie, "the foremost governor of the foremost state in the union must be given first consideration in the Democratic nomination for the presidency."

Gov. Ritchie scored the policy of Washington in sending prohibition agents across the line into Maryland "to enforce the most sumptuary of all laws."

THOMAS JEFFERSON GRANTED DIVORCE

RENO, Nev., Nov. 16.—Thomas L. Jefferson, veteran actor, today must have had poignant memories of the role he played so often in Frank Bacon's play "Lightnin'." Charging cruelty, Jefferson was granted a divorce here yesterday from his wife to whom he had been married forty-eight years.

In the play, however, it was "Lightnin'" Bill Jones who was named defendant in the divorce action, and a reconciliation and happy ending marked the climax of the drama.

The elderly mummer quietly recounted the basis of his charges, told of the purported cruelty of his wife and recounted how she objected to the love scenes she portrayed as the key character in the stage presentation of the famous play revolving around a divorce action.

The couple have three children, all of them of age.

BUYING HOLIDAY NEARS

Xenia merchants were drawing up their battle lines Wednesday prepared to fire the first shot early Thursday morning in what is promised to be the biggest buying feast in years—the Dollar Day being sponsored by the Xenia Retail Merchants' Association.

Guaranteed bargain offers composed the principal guns to be used Thursday, for a committee of the association censored every special bargain offer and their inspection insured the buying public bona fide values at ridiculously low prices.

In addition to the dollar specials, many of the merchants are making especially attractive offers on other merchandise, including generous price-slashing on higher-priced goods. Members of the organization predicted Wednesday that with clement weather prevailing Xenia stores will be bombarded by the biggest buying rush in years.

This prediction was based on the fact that these bargain offers are not being offered at the far end of the season, when merchandise moves slowly, but during the most sanguine buying season of the year, the time just before Christmas.

DEATH LIST MOUNTS WHEN OHIO HUNTERS BEGIN OPEN SEASON

Necessity Of Caution Urged As Casualty List Increases

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 16.—Ohio today was checking its list of dead and wounded resulting from a concerted and continuous shotgun barrage which has been in progress on all rural fronts since Tuesday, the first day of hunting season.

The death toll was mounting today and authorities urge that hunters exercise every precaution to avoid accidents.

Batavia—George W. Corbin, 40, farmer, was killed Tuesday by an accidental discharge from a gun carried by Tom Rose, of Hamilton.

Loveland—Frank Corwin, 30, farmer, was accidentally killed Tuesday by a hunting companion.

Marion—Hugh Davis, 79, died of heart failure and over-exertion shortly after starting out to hunt.

Tuesday, Donald Staley, 34, was shot in the right foot while climbing a fence.

Wooster—R. T. Menuez, 19, is in a serious condition after being accidentally shot by his father.

Columbus—Patrick Giblin, 35, of Cleveland, is suffering from wounds that will result in the loss of his right eye suffered when his gun was accidentally discharged while hunting near here late Tuesday.

Lancaster—Ernest Rhymer, 20, of Columbus, is suffering from slight wounds received when he was shot by a stranger near here Tuesday.

NUNS AND CHILDREN IMPERILED IN FIRE

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Nov. 16.—Fire of undetermined origin which imperiled the lives of forty-three nuns and seventy-five children at Mount Mercy Academy here was brought under control early today after it had raged two hours and caused loss of probably $100,000.

One three-story building, a remodeled farm house used as music conservatory and also as a dormitory for the sisters, was destroyed, the nuns leaving most of their personal belongings in their haste to get the children out of a large dormitory adjoining when it appeared this would take fire also.

The children were cared for in nearby homes until the flames, discovered about midnight, were brought under control. Later most of them returned to their quarters.

DEMOCRAT WINNER IN COLORADO RACE

DENVER, Nov. 16.—Judge S. Harrison White, a Democratic candidate on a Volstead modification platform, was elected to congress today by a vote of 4,720 majority over his nearest rival, State Senator Francis J. Knauss, Republican.

The special election yesterday was held to fill the seat left vacant by the death of William N. Valle.

DELAYS TRIP AGAIN

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 16.—Adverse weather conditions at sea today were still forestalling the plans of Captain Frederick A. Giles, British airman, to fly from here to Australia, via Hawaii and other Pacific points.

"SCARFACE AL" CAPONE DETHRONED

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.—The underworld's throne room, wherein "his majesty," "Scarface Al" Capone, has been pictured as lounging amid the glitter of steel-blue rifle and machine gun barrels while directing the destiny of Chicago's gambling trust, was empty today.

For "King" Capone has abdicated.

His fall from power, reports have it, was hastened by the intensive police drive against gambling. Capone, authorities say, was the overlord of this particular vice in Chicago and environs, just as he was ruler of the illicit alcohol traffic.

But the "alky" racket had become a bit too nerve wracking, even for the redoubtable Capone, so he began to concentrate on gambling. His chief lieutenant, police say, was one James Mondl, who was given blanket authority to "okay" new palaces of chance wherever and whenever he thought the investment would prove profitable.

Mondl, it is said, became a little too ambitious and so many places were opened that business went into an awful slump. The proprietors of the new places began to complain. Just then the police lid on gambling was ordered and all places were closed.

The disgruntled proprietors blamed Capone and Mondl. The gambling clique had become so powerful, it was said, they were able to overthrow both Capone and Mondl. Capone surprised the group by agreeing to abdicate quietly, taking Mondl out with him.

Thus the feared "Scarface Al," who used to say it with bullets, stepped down and out without a struggle.

Meanwhile the gamblers have adjourned to Hot Springs and West Baden to elect a new leader and to await "political readjustments" in Chicago that will permit the reopening of the palaces of chance.

CENTRAL OHIO MAY EXPECT COLD WAVE LATE WEDNESDAY NIGHT

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 16.—Central Ohio late today and tonight will be gripped by a cold wave which was delayed Tuesday night by a drizzling rain and warm winds from the south.

This was the forecast today of the U. S. Weather Bureau here. The wind will shift to the north-east this afternoon, according to officials of the bureau, and the mercury will drop slightly below freezing tonight.

A cold wave bearing down from the northwest is scheduled to hit the mid-west before tonight. Snow already covers the Dakotas, Minnesota, Wisconsin and northern Michigan and freezing temperatures are reported at Kansas City and Lincoln, Nebraska.

SEVEN COUNTIES PROPOSE PLAN OF RURAL POLICE TO OHIO GRANGE

Highway Improvements And Stricter Enforcement Of Game Laws Urged In Resolutions Before Grangers

CLEVELAND, Nov. 16.—Following a brief business session this morning, the Ohio State Grange, now holding its fifty-fifth session, was to recess to enable members to attend meetings of the National Grange, which opens its 61st annual convention here today.

Fifty resolutions already have been presented to the state organization, which opened its four-day convention yesterday. Outstanding among these were suggestions for a system of rural police, from seven different counties; highway improvement proposals, and a demand for stricter enforcement of bird and game laws.

The Interstate Commerce Commission was criticized for reducing freight rates on fruit from California.

"The reduction is really a tax on Ohio orchardists," said one delegate.

Summit County opposed white way lighting of highways as proposed in some districts.

Marion County called for heavier fines for all occupants of cars parked on highways for "petting parties."

The National Grange was to start today's program at 11 a. m. L. J. Taber, national master, was to address the convention at 2 p. m.

JURIST IS DEAD

GREENVILLE, O., Nov. 16.—Common Pleas Judge Martin Trainor, 67, died at his home here today of acute indigestion. Judge Trainor had practiced law here for forty-one years.

He was owned by Remus that he used to call his "dream house" when he and the woman he killed lived in splendor there. Nearly every room in the place is now bare, having been stripped of all its furnishings by Mrs. Remus when Remus was in jail. Even the alabaster lions in front of the home were removed.

"I am a sad mother, for I am afraid that maybe everything will not come out all right for my boy, although he assures me that it will," said Mrs. Remus. "He was such a good boy; he always helped me and he was so ambitious."

"My husband had rheumatism for years and could not work but George always took care of us. He worked hard in the drug store in Chicago by day, studied at night, and became an optician. Then he studied law and I was so proud when he was admitted to the bar."

Mrs. Remus did not seem to know much about her son's turning from the law to engage in bootlegging on a stupendous scale, but she did know about his married life.

"His first wife was a good woman," she said, "but his second wife made him her slave. And see how she took everything from this house, the paintings from the wall, the fixtures, the statues, everything."

Tears came into Mrs. Remus' eyes as she told of having visited her son in jail and of him trying to cheer her up.

"To think," she cried, "that he—such a fine son, who was so good to me—in such a place."

Mrs. Remus said the first thing he asked her was whether his father's grave was taken care of at the cemetery. "He always used to see to that," she said.

"The last thing he does every night is to telephone me from the jail," said the little old mother sadly.

"He says cheerily, 'Good night, mother,' but somehow I just can't be cheerful. The future looks so dark."

"HE WAS SUCH A GOOD BOY" SAYS MOTHER OF GEORGE REMUS

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 16.—"Every night I pray for my son—pray that he will not have to die in the electric chair. I have placed my trust in God."

Mrs. Frank Remus, the gray-haired 78-year-old mother of George Remus, who is on trial for the murder of his wife, Imogene, whom he shot and killed in Eden Park, Cincinnati, on October 6 last, made this statement in broken accents to International News Service in an exclusive interview today.

She has come from Chicago to be near her son, now battling in court to escape the death penalty. She is staying in the thirty-room mansion owned by Remus that he used to call his "dream house" when he and the woman he killed lived in splendor there. Nearly every room in the place is now bare, having been stripped of all its furnishings by Mrs. Remus when Remus was in jail. Even the alabaster lions in front of the home were removed.

"I am a sad mother, for I am afraid that maybe everything will not come out all right for my boy, although he assures me that it will," said Mrs. Remus. "He was such a good boy; he always helped me and he was so ambitious."

"My husband had rheumatism for years and could not work but George always took care of us. He worked hard in the drug store in Chicago by day, studied at night, and became an optician. Then he studied law and I was so proud when he was admitted to the bar."

Mrs. Remus did not seem to know much about her son's turning from the law to engage in bootlegging on a stupendous scale, but she did know about his married life.

MEXICO PURCHASED NICARAGUA ENMITY FOR UNITED STATES

Newspaper Charges With Buying Anti-American Policy

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The wave of anti-American sentiment that sprang up throughout Central America over President Coolidge's Nicaraguan policy was, in part, "purchased" by the Mexican government, the Washington Herald asserted today in the fourth of a series of articles exposing Mexican activities in the recent Nicaraguan situation.

Between December 15 and February 3 last, the Herald declares that President Calles sent $1,075,000 in cash into Nicaragua and contiguous countries to "whip up" anti-American sentiment. The Herald prints facsimiles of the orders upon the Mexican treasury for the money, which contained the instruction, "charge this item to secret expenditures of the executive (President Calles)."

The money was spent, the Herald says, not only to finance and arm the Liberal government of Dr. Juan B. Sacasa, in Nicaragua, but also to purchase newspaper propaganda against the United States and its foreign policy.

Much of the money, the Herald states, was expended under the direction of Ambassador Alfonso Cravioto in Guatemala, "who for years has been known as one of Mexico's ablest educators and writers. He was sent to Guatemala for the definite purpose of winning that country to an anti-American understanding with Mexico."

One of the documents reproduced by the Herald, and stated to have come from the secret archives of the Mexican foreign office, directs the payment of one hundred thousand pesos ($50,000) to Cravioto "for expenditures for newspaper propaganda in favor of Mexico."

Another document directs the payment of $25,000 state the said sum is to be applied to propaganda expenses in favor of Mexico.

GAS BLAST DEATHS MAY REACH FIFTY

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 16.—With thirty persons still listed today as "missing" as a result of the gas tank explosion here Monday, possibility arose that the total death toll may exceed fifty.

Already twenty-seven are known dead, others are expected to succumb to their injuries and of the missing, many are believed lying dead beneath tons of debris.

The cellar of the Pittsburgh Clay Pot Co., now a mass of tangled wreckage, may yield many of the thirty missing men. The plant employed 117 who were at work when the nearby tank of the Equitable Gas Company let go its terrific blast. Several days will be required to penetrate to the bottom of the cellar.

Nearly a hundred of the total of 500 injured were still confined in hospitals today, a definite check had placed the number of ruined homes and factories at 200 and the total property damage at many millions.

ALIENS ABOUT TO BE DEPORTED ESCAPE FROM DETENTION HOUSE

CAMDEN, N. J., Nov. 16.—After four unsuccessful attempts to escape from the Detention House in the Gloucester, N. J., immigration station near here, four aliens, awaiting deportation following conviction on criminal charges, saved through the iron bars of their cells to freedom early today.

Police in cities within a radius of 100 miles of the immigration station have been notified of the escape. The fugitives are Bert Hellico, 30, an Englishman; William Stevenson, 19, an Irishman; Albert Eggers, 20, a German, and Joseph Lasavitch, 27, a Slav.

Through their escape, it was learned, trouble has been brewing among the prisoners for about two weeks, and that a wholesale jail delivery had been attempted, in which guards fought the aliens for nearly an hour before quelling the mutiny. Thirty-five windows were shattered and a number of persons were slightly hurt.

PRINCESS XENIA ON NON-STOP ATTEMPT DESPITE WARNINGS

Nothing Heard From McIntosh After He Left England

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Up to a late hour this morning, no word had been received of the airplane "Princess Xenia," carrying Captain Robert McIntosh and his pilot Bert Hinkler on an attempted non-stop flight from England to India.

Forty minutes after leaving Upraven airdrome yesterday, the plane was sighted over the Manston airdrome in Kent. This was the one and only report received of the plane's progress.

After passing over Manston the flyers headed out over the North Sea.

Captain McIntosh and Hinkler hope to break the non-stop flight record established by Clarence Chamberlain when, with Charles Levine, he flew the Bellanca monoplane Columbia from New York to Kothbus, Germany.

The Englishmen started off despite warnings by the air ministry that snow and fog would most likely bother them most of the way to Constantinople.

ENFORCING DRY LAW HAS COST 175 LIVES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Eight years of effort on the part of the government to dry up the United States has cost the lives of 175 persons—126 citizens and forty-nine prohibition agents, all "killed in action."

These figures were made public by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Seymour Lowman today in answer to the charges of Senator Edwards (D) of New Jersey, that the killings of citizens by prohibition agents runs into "four figures."

Of course, these figures do not take into account the hundreds of persons killed in private feuds, bootlegging wars, and general criminal activity which grew out of prohibition. They refer only to agents' activities.

SAN FRANCISCO AND DETROIT WIN FAVOR FROM REPUBLICANS

Both May Be Avoided However To Convene In Mid-West

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The Republican national committee will meet here three weeks hence to select the site of 1928 national convention, and the pre-fight betting is that neither San Francisco or Detroit will get the call.

William H. Crocker, the California representative on the committee, leaves the coast Sunday for Washington. He has in his pocket according to advance reports, a loud speaker in the form of a certified check for $250,000 to exhibit to the committee, to say nothing of a considerable number of personal pledges which he has been industriously collecting for some months.

Had not President Coolidge withdrawn from the 1928 race it is considered assured that the convention would have gone to San Francisco. More than half the members of the committee had already agreed to it, but Mr. Coolidge's withdrawal, coupled with the candidacy of Herbert Hoover, a Californian, moved a number of them to withdraw their pledges. These members did not believe it a wise move to take the convention into any state where there will be a favorite son candidate, and there was a general switching of sentiment to Detroit. There are still others, particularly those from Mississippi valley, who believe the convention should go to that region.

Eleven cities in all have made formal bids for the convention—Minneapolis, Kansas City, Seattle, San Francisco, San Antonio, Chicago, Cleveland, Omaha, Denver and Philadelphia.

In the final analysis, however, it is believed that the committee will narrow its choice down to San Francisco, Detroit, or a mid-western site that is within hugging distance of the disgruntled grain belt.

Minneapolis is not certain it can entertain the convention here a convention in June due to a conflict in auditorium dates. Leaving Minneapolis out, there would be only three sites left for the Republican between the Rockies and the Mississippi. Kansas City, Denver and Omaha. There has appeared in great Republican sentiment for either of these places.

San Francisco's stock has been materially boosted by Charles L. Hilles, the New York committee man, a strong supporter of Charles E. Hughes for the nomination. The fact that Herbert Hoover is a Californian and a candidate is no reason, in Hilles' opinion, why the convention should not go to the coast metropolis. The far west-erners also have the argument in their favor that no Republican convention has ever been held on the coast.

The Democrats will not select a convention site until mid-January. It is believed probable that if the Republicans decide to go to the coast, the Democrats will select Detroit. The Michigan metropolis just across the river from Canada has succeeded in attracting a lot of support in both parties.

COLLEGE SPLIT BY MILITARIST ISSUE

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—While the anti-militarists at City College today were secretly considering their next action in view of the expulsion of two protesting fellow students, the authorities and the bulk of the student body came into the open with two decisive attacks.

Hymen Sokoroff, president of the Student Council, which represents 4,000 City College students, gave unqualified support to President Frederick P. Robinson and his associates. Sokoroff asserted that the entire student body is behind the college officials in their expulsion of the two leading anti-militarists.

At the same time, Professor Walter G. Hurbert, faculty member in charge of the assignment of school rooms for student meetings, announced that he had refused to permit the Inter-Club Council to hold a meeting tomorrow, the announced purpose of which was to discuss militarism in the colleges.

THESE SKATERS!

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 16.—When Mrs. Helen Cook of Brooklyn confronted four Cooks of Newark and discovered that their husbands were one and the same person, the result was a divorce.

Walter Cook, accused of deserting his first wife and three children, was arraigned on the desertion charge today.

Both women said they had met Cook at skating rinks and had been fascinated by his expert roll skating.

STATISTICS PROVE BOOKS CIRCULATED AT BRANCH STATION

The first statistics relative to the use of books placed throughout the county by the County District Library have just been obtained.

The two branches at Yellow Springs and Wilberforce lead the list with 742 books circulated at Yellow Springs and 349 at Wilberforce. This is an increase of more than 50 per cent over the previous months' figures at Yellow Springs and 84 per cent for Wilberforce. The big increase at Wilberforce is accounted for by the fact that the branch did not open until late in September and a full month's work was not done until October.

The deposit stations all reported a brisk trade. Of the deposit stations, Zimmermann was far in the lead with a circulation of 117 for the month. Four hundred and sixty-two books circulated from the eight deposit stations while one high school collection had a circulation of 167. Other school collections were not counted.

FINED FOR LEAVING UN-LIGHTED TRUCK

Pleading guilty to a charge of operating a truck not equipped with a tail light, Raymond C. Frye, Dayton, O., was fined $15 and costs by R. O. Copey, justice of the peace, Tuesday.

Frye was arrested last Friday night by O. H. Cornwell, county road patrolman, after motorists had complained that a truck had been left standing on the Springfield Pike after dark, in violation of the state law which prohibits parking of vehicles on public highways.

Several accidents were reported to have been narrowly averted because the truck did not display lights.

Frye declared the motor went "dead" about 4 o'clock. The driver left the truck along the road and the vehicle was unguarded from 4 to 7:30 p. m., authorities stated.

Three charges were placed against the driver, namely, blocking the road, driving a car equipped with but one license, and operating a car without a tail light, but the first two were dismissed, after Frye had explained his position.

Answers to Mothers

God could not be everywhere; therefore He made mothers. — Jewish Proverb.

Notes on Teeth

Perhaps there is nothing that will make an expectant mother realize the importance of her diet any more than knowing that all of the baby's first teeth and the germs (beginnings) of the upper and lower first grinders are partially calmed at the time of birth. (The germs of the remaining permanent teeth, with the exception of the third molars or grinders, are present at birth.)

If the mother's diet does not contain sufficient lime and other elements necessary for the teeth and bone development, Nature seems to have designed that the baby is going to get some of them from the mother's own bones and teeth. It is for this reason that the mother's teeth soften and decay so rapidly during pregnancy, and the expression "For every child, a tooth" which used to be quoted, is based on this. I'm not going into the diet during pregnancy in this article, for we have one on the subject if you are interested. (Enclose a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.)

Cutting teeth is a physiologic process and should not be accompanied by any serious difficulty. Too often children may be rather seriously ill and the cause for it may be laid to the teeth. Occasionally there may be some disorder, which is due to the teeth, but you must find out first if there isn't some other cause.

Lancing of the gums used to be practiced more often than it is now, but it is often unsuccessful, for the cut heals too rapidly. Sometimes, if the edge of the tooth is just about to erupt, rubbing it and pressing it through may be effective. Irregularity in position of the teeth is due to overcrowding, and overcrowding is usually due to undeveloped jaws, which in turn are due to incorrect feeding and to the results of enlarged adenoids and tonsils. If the adenoids and tonsils are sufficiently large enough to cause mouth-breathing, they interfere with the proper blood supply to the jaw so it won't grow correctly and the teeth may be crowded when they come in. Thumb sucking and the use of the pacifier most certainly will deform the mouth in some children, too.

If the teeth are coming in irregularly, the sooner you visit the dentist who specializes in straightening teeth (orthodontist) the better. You must not wait for the child to outgrow it, for he won't; and the younger he is when the appliances are put on the teeth to straighten them, the easier they are to straighten, and the better it is for the teeth which have not yet come in.

Rickets is the most common cause of irregularity in the enamel of the teeth, and ridges. (Proper diet, sunshine and cod liver oil for rickets.)

The green stains such as are found on children's teeth at the gum margins are due to putrefactive bacteria in combination with mucin (a constituent of the saliva). A common salt or baking soda solution, one-quarter teaspoonful to the small cup of water, helps prevent the bacterial layers. Brushing at least four times a day is recommended. Ordinary soap and chalk, in the form of a paste or powder, is a good dentifrice.

Decay in children's teeth, including the first teeth, should receive immediate dental attention.

Supernumerary Teeth (extra teeth). Occasionally Nature is over-generous in the matter of teeth, and may add an extra one or two. These can occupy most any position in the mouth, but most frequently are found in the front of the mouth. Treatment for these must be instituted as soon as the teeth are detected. Occasionally, Nature, instead of being over-generous, is under-generous, and there may be a congenital lack of a tooth or so. The extra teeth and the absence of them are probably an inherited characteristic.

Tomorrow—Food and Health.

PARALYZED MAN IS ACCUSED OF ATTACK ON STEP-DAUGHTER

William Hicks, 35, colored, 705 E. Church St., who is paralyzed on the right side, was bound over to the grand jury by Mayor John W. Prugh on a statutory charge Wednesday morning. He pleaded guilty and in default of $1,000 bond, was committed to the County Jail.

The offense was committed November 8 on his step-daughter, Eula Raspberry, 15, a minor, according to an affidavit filed by his wife, Eliza Hicks. Hicks confessed, according to police.

Mrs. Hicks told Police Chief M. E. Graham her husband threatened to shoot her at their home Tuesday afternoon about 6 o'clock when she accused him of being intimate with his step-daughter.

She declared that he ran into the house and returned with a .32 caliber revolver in his pocket.

Mrs. Hicks started to walk away from the house but her husband shouted for her to come back, under a threat that he would shoot, she said.

Police were told Mrs. Hicks reached for the gun and in the ensuing struggle, both fell to the ground, the revolver dropping out of Hicks' pocket. Mrs. Hicks succeeded in picking up the weapon and her husband attempted to bite her on the right arm she said. Using the weapon as a club, she struck him on the head with the revolver, momentarily stunning him, and then ran to Police Headquarters.

Hicks recovered from the blow and followed his wife to headquarters. After both had been questioned, Hicks was locked up.

The Hicks family has been living in Xenia for the last six months, coming here from Dayton. They lived in Alabama eight years ago and later moved to Newark, O., and then Dayton. Police learned Hicks was involved in a shooting affray while living in Newark.

HEALTH HINTS For Parents

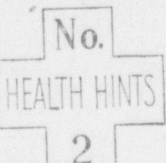

Here's a way to make the most delicate boy hale and hearty, and "hard as nails." A way to build his body, and put on weight. Heed this hint, and no boy or girl of yours need ever take another cathartic!

Most ailments of children begin with being bilious; end the trouble then and there, with a spoonful of California Fig Syrup. Nothing stronger, nothing else. The bowels will do their duty without using force! If your children have already contracted the laxative habit, fig syrup will wean them away from it.

California Fig Syrup is a purely vegetable product. It will do any child a world of good; it is, in fact, a very wonderful conditioner for children or adults. Its rich, fruity flavor is so delicious, it's no hardship to take! Nor can it harm even an infant! Only one caution: be sure to get the genuine California Fig Syrup; don't neglect to say "California." It isn't expensive — sixty cents for a generous bottle at all dealers.

Try California Fig Syrup two weeks on any child, and let his altered appearance and actions tell the full story.

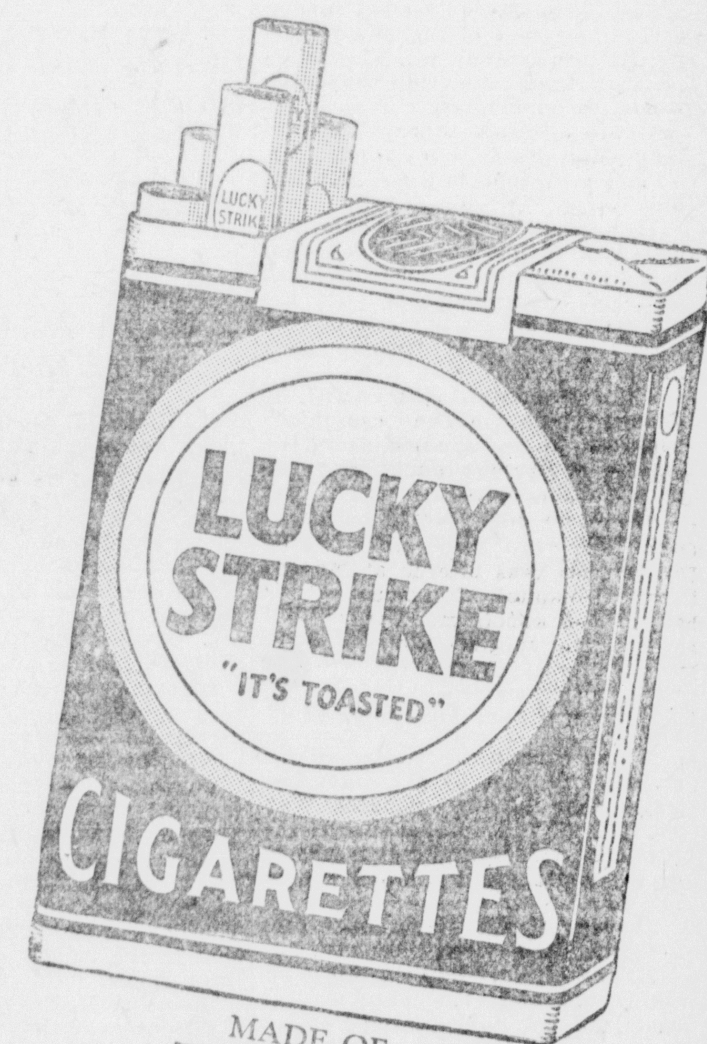

"Harry Pollard says Luckies have a delicious flavor and I agree"

Said Lew Cody to Bert Roach while they were resting between the taking of scenes while "on location."

You, too, will find that LUCKY STRIKES give the greatest pleasure—Mild and Mellow, the finest cigarettes you ever smoked. Made of the choicest tobaccos, properly aged and blended with great skill, and there is an extra process—"IT'S TOASTED"—no harshness, not a bit of bite.

Harry Pollard,
Director of Feature Photoplays, writes:

"The completion of my latest feature 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' for Universal Pictures Corporation, has once more proven to me that Lucky Strikes are the ideal cigarettes for those of us whose voices are under continuous and intense strain. In making this picture, I was, for many hours at a time, shouting directions to a host of players. At the same time I smoked many Lucky Strikes. I never felt the slightest throat irritation, and the delicious flavor of these cigarettes was a welcome relaxation in my work."

Plan Recital At Parish House On Friday

Miss Marjorie Street, pianist, and Miss Lois Street, cellist, assisted by the Duo-Art reproducing piano, furnished by the Anderson Piano Co., Dayton, will give a recital Friday evening, November 18, at 8 o'clock in the Episcopal Church Parish House.

An interesting program is being planned. Miss Marjorie Street will play a group of alternating records with the Duo-Art piano. The records that will be used were made by famous artists such as Paderewski, Rudolph Ganz and Harold Bauer and their interpretation is recorded very accurately.

Miss Esther Smith, dramatic art instructor of Central High School, will give a group of readings.

Tickets for the recital may be obtained from Mrs. Charles Adair at a nominal sum, the proceeds to go toward the piano fund of the Parish House.

The program is as follows:

DR. ROBERT AUSTIN

IS MARRIED IN DAYTON.

Dr. Robert Charlton Austin, Dayton, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Austin, Sugar Creek Twp., and Mrs. Louise Allaman Kirkpatrick, Dayton, were united in marriage Tuesday at eight o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Allaman, Superior Ave., Dayton.

Dr. Hugh O. Evans, Westminster Presbyterian Church, Dayton, read the ceremony which was witnessed by only members of the immediate families. The bride wore a frock of grey crepe, Elizabeth with a corsage of orchids.

Following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served. Later, Dr. and Mrs. Austin left for New York, from where they will sail Wednesday on the Aquatania for Europe. They will spend some time in London, Scotland and Switzerland. Following a stay in Paris they will go to the Riviera, where they will remain some time. They will sail from Genoa and take the Mediterranean cruise, returning to Dayton Christmas eve.

Mrs. Austin is a member of a prominent Dayton family and is well known in that city. Dr. Austin, following his graduation from Ohio Wesleyan and Ohio State Universities, was interne at Mount Carmel Hospital, Columbus, until he received appointment as assistant on the surgical staff of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., where he remained four years.

During the war he was a member of base hospital unit 114, where he was captain of the medical corps. He is a member of the American College of Surgeons.

Dr. and Mrs. Austin will make their home temporarily at the Allaman residence on Superior Ave., and will later move to Oakwood.

SCENES OF PASSION

PLAY AT LOCAL CHURCH

A graphic presentation of the Oberammergau Passion Play, will be made at First M. E. Church, Monday evening, November 21, under the auspices of Division Ten, Ladies Aid Society of that Church.

By means of slides, Dr. Ira P. Berry, Chicago, will carry out the part of each of the characters in the play. The presentation is announced as a unique combination of picture, impersonation and voice tones. The largest cities in America have pronounced it the best presentation of the drama ever produced.

Dr. Berry has studied with the actors themselves. One will hear the voice of Anton Lang, as the Christ; the voice of Herod, Judas, Mary and others. The performance has caused Dr. Berry to be known as "The Man of Many Voices."

Dr. Berry's life history reads like a fairy tale. At the age of six he was an orphan, at sixteen a penniless stranger in the Union Stockyards of Chicago and at twenty-five was superintendent of schools and was ordained minister at thirty-four. He was pastor of one of Chicago's largest churches at thirty-nine. He has visited the leading countries of Europe and has addressed thousands on his travels.

Mrs. J. L. Oglesbee is chairman of the committee, bringing Dr. Berry and his pictures to Xenia, and other members are Mrs. Charles A. Keible and Mrs. Thurman Early.

PUPILS FURNISH

P.T.A. A. PROGRAM

Pupils of the second grade entertained the Spring Hill P.T.A., at the regular meeting Monday afternoon. A second grade "orchestra" furnished music and a "Little Pilgrims' Drill" songs and recitations were given.

The program was in charge of Mrs. Lewis Clark, Mrs. Herman Eavey, president of Orient Hill P.T.A., gave a report of the state convention at Warren, O. Arrangements were made for the association to furnish baskets to families of needy children in the school.

The president urged the organization's support of the play, "The Flapper Grandmother" to be presented next Tuesday and Wednesday.

The ways and means committee will meet Thursday afternoon to plan for a social, to be held soon.

TRINITY SOCIAL

The Queen Esther Circle of Trinity M. E. Church held a banquet Tuesday evening, with covers laid for twenty-four. Several members of the society took part in a program later in the evening.

MISS MARJORIE STREET

PROGRAM ENJOYED AT HOME CULTURE MEETING

Members of the Home Culture Club answered roll call with the full names of their grandmothers, when the club was entertained at the home of Mrs. John Milroy, Cedarville, Tuesday afternoon.

Two splendid papers were given, the first "The Women of the Mayflower" by Mrs. H. C. Lewis and the second, "The Modern Grandmother" by Mrs. W. C. Liffie.

A poem "Armistice Day Thanksgiving" was given by Mrs. J. Harry Nagley. Several musical numbers were given by Mrs. Walter Corry. The entire program was highly appreciated.

Refreshments, suggestive of the approach of Thanksgiving were served. Twenty members and two guests were received.

WOMAN'S CAREER IS SUBJECT OF PAPERS

"Should a Woman Neglect Her Career or Business Vocation after Marriage?" was the interesting topic cleverly discussed by Mrs. W. H. Humphrey, before the Junior Woman's Club at the home of Mrs. M. L. Wolf, N. King St., Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Humphrey took neither the affirmative nor the negative side of the question, but presented both phases in a charming way.

"Foremost Women in America" was a fitting companion paper, presented by Mrs. D. W. Cherry. The meeting was one of the most enjoyable on the club calendar.

LIBRARY WORK SUBJECT OF P.T.A. PROGRAM

An interesting talk on work of the Greene County District Library by Miss Mildred W. Sandoe, librarian, was augmented with a display of children's books at the meeting of McKinley P.T.A. Monday at the school.

Miss Jean B. Elwell also gave a short talk to the society. A short business meeting was held before the program and light refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

WILL ENTERTAIN MISSIONARY SOCIETY

Mrs. L. A. Washburn will entertain members of the Women's Home Missionary Society of Trinity M. E. Church at 7:30 o'clock Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

This is the annual thank offering meeting. Members are asked to bring canned fruit for the barrel the society is packing.

COUPLE MARRIED AT LOCAL PARSONAGE

Announcement is being made of the marriage of Miss Maude Mae Shepherd, Yellow Springs, and Mr. Frank C. Stephens, Broad St., Columbus, which took place at Trinity M. E. parsonage, this city, Saturday, November 12, the Rev. L. A. Washburn, officiating.

Miss Florence White entertained the Women's Missionary Society, Clifton Presbyterian Church, Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Roy Harris, 537 S. Monroe St., underwent a serious operation at McClellan Hospital, Tuesday. She is recovering nicely.

Miss Florence White entertained grand matron of the Eighteenth District, O. E. S., attended the school of instruction for deputies at Springfield, Tuesday. Twenty-five deputies attended the meeting at the Masonic Home.

The Rev. Jesse Swank, Dayton, superintendent of the West Ohio Conference, M. E. Church, will preach at Trinity M. E. Church, Wednesday night, November 16, at 7:30. The business of the quarterly conference will follow.

Mrs. Robert Sands, San Gabriel, Cal., who has been the guest for some time of Mrs. Meda Gowdy, E. Church St., is leaving Thursday for the west. Mrs. Gowdy will accompany Mrs. Sands as far as Chicago, where she will make a visit.

Hon. Frederick S. Attwood of Minneapolis, blind orator and Supreme Prelate of the Knights of Pythias will arrive in Xenia Wednesday evening and be in attendance at the regular meeting of Ivanhoe Lodge No. 56, Mr. Attwood is scheduled to address the students of Central High School Thursday afternoon and will speak to the public Thursday evening at 7:30 at the K. of P. MANY HUNTERS BUT NO CASUALTIES ARE REPORTED IN XENIA

No casualties or even minor accident were reported to mar the opening of the rabbit hunting season in Greene County Tuesday although hundreds of nimrods were up at sunrise to take advantage of the first legal day of the sport.

More than 300 hunting licenses have been issued by Clerk of Courts Harvey Elam but the closed season on squirrel is held responsible for a slight falling off in the number taking out licenses this year.

New laws passed by the state legislature also became effective Tuesday. The daily bag limit is cut from ten to five rabbits and no hunter will be permitted to have more than that number in his possession any one day.

No arrests were made Tuesday in Greene County for violations of the hunting laws, according to District Game Warden Karl Keller, although a few complaints about trespassers were made by farmers.

Warden Keller declares Greene County was an exception in this respect from surrounding counties and that local hunters have set a good example to start off the season.

ALLEGED BANDIT IS SHOT BY POLICEMAN

DETROIT, Nov. 16.—Frank Gillespie, 29, St. Louis, Mo., is dying in Receiving Hospital and one of three accomplices is seriously wounded and two others, one a woman, are held by police on charges of robbery armed.

The men were shot in a close range pistol duel with Patrolman Charles Boyd during an attempted holdup of a filling station last night.

Charles O'Keefe, 28, the wounded accomplice of Gillespie is thought by police to be an escaped convict from Jefferson City, Mo., where he had been serving a fourteen-year sentence for robbery armed.

Gillespie and O'Keefe confessed to Prosecutor John D. Watts that they had participated in four other robberies.

CHARLEY PADDOCK

Policeman Bob McAllister holds the record for the 100-meter and the 150-yard distances.

Citing France's recent victory over the American Davis cup tennis team as an illustration, Charles Paddock, champion sprinter of the world, asserted that athletes in this country are not devoting as much thought to training as in former years, in the course of an address on the subject, "Play the Game," as the second number of Central High School's Lyceum course in Jean B. Elwell Auditorium Tuesday night.

Paddock, who holds the world's record for the 220-yard dash, is not only a world-famous athlete—a speaker of considerable fame and a widely known writer, but he has had considerable experience on the motion picture lots in Los Angeles.

American athletes display as much interest in sports as heretofore but not from a training standpoint, he declared.

The United States, he continued, takes a more vigorous part in all form of athletics than any other country, but in the last few years has been declining.

Charlie, who has been a world champion in one of the most strenuous of all sport branches for seven years, an amazing record, attributes his success to two things: clean living and honorable sportsmanship.

In his talk Tuesday night, Paddock stressed the importance of athletics in both school and national affairs and the friendly relations it brings about between different countries.

As for sprinting races, in which he excels, Paddock divides a present race into three classes—the importance of the start, the stride and the finish.

He also discussed a theme close to his heart—clean sportsmanship—in the battle of life, as well as on the athletic field. He pointed out instances of good sportsmanship on the part of American athletes, with whom he has had personal contact, and from his own experiences, advised against a tendency toward over-confidence in any branch of athletics.

Charlie also talked of football, comparing the teams of yesterday and today. Elevens of today are faster but lack the stamina and endurance of teams of former years and in this respect, are not as great, he maintained.

Paddock proved to be a fluent speaker, with an incisive and thought-inspiring style and a keen appreciation of humor.

The speaker was introduced by Principal Louis Hammerle. Preceding the talk, the high school orchestra, under the direction of E. G. Whitworth, rendered musical selections. An unusually large crowd heard the address.

Taylor and Keylor will appear on the third number of the course December 6.

MAKING THE HEART GROW FONDER

Many of our thinkers believe the American family is losing its hold as a social influence. They note that many people spend only a small amount of time in their homes, and they use the home as a place only to sleep and take some of their meals in.

Yet it was remarked at a recent conference of social workers held at Buffalo, N. Y., on the problems of family life, that it is an extremely difficult thing to break up any family. Social workers will say that when they try to take care of children who are not being properly brought up, the parents are apt to make the most serious kind of objections, and fight such proceedings very bitterly. Parents seem to be just as much attached to their children as ever before, and they will raise the most strenuous objections if anyone tries to separate them. Family life will never be broken up as long as this attachment exists.

Some may say that the children do not return this attachment. But while we hear of many boys and girls running away, yet in former years many boys used to run away to go out into frontier regions or to go to sea.

Owing to entertainments, automobiles, sports, etc., people may not stay in their homes as much as formerly. Also there are many who do not seem to take any particular pains to have their children brought up right. But the family gathers three times a day for meals, and the children can be depended upon to turn up then. If the parents have any firmness or moral principle, they still have plenty of opportunity to impress good ideas on those roving youngsters of theirs. And the pains which people take to keep up and beautify their homes, shows that they care more about family life than some realize.

GIRLS SEEKING FAME OR FUN

The Los Angeles juvenile court was asked to search for 700 missing girls the past year. Many of them hoped to get into the movies. Their reasons for disappearing are classified as follows: Adventure, dislike for discipline, desire for careers, love affair with youth of whom family disapproved, fear of disgrace.

Into every large city such girls come, hoping for success in the entertainment or business world. If a girl has talent, she can get recognition without leaving home, and then the opportunities come naturally. But if she merely plunges into some big city without some sure position, she is jumping off into thin air. Thousands of these girls annually, some of them from Ohio, go down into careers of misery because they would not take advice.

VITAL PARTS OF MODERN LIFE

The public service corporations and the daily and weekly newspapers are brothers under the skin, both being public utilities serving the American people with an essential service at a remarkably low cost, due to quantity production.

Of the two it would be impossible to say which is the most essential. The newspapers and the major utilities—light, power, gas, telephone and street railway, probably serve about the same number of customers.

It would be a monumental catastrophe if either the utilities or the newspapers should discontinue service for a single day. Both are a vital part of modern life. In one year public utilities spent approximately $25,000,000 for advertising, of which 63 per cent was used in the newspapers.

The Way of the World

BE YOUR OWN MAN

The most worth while achievement in life is the achievement of freedom. Freedom in the right sense does not mean to be without a job—working for nobody, belonging to nothing. Freedom is a matter of being sure of oneself and being without fear. Most men and women are hedged in and made in and made miserable by fears. They fear people for whom they work or with whom they are associated. They fear public opinion. They fear to have convictions and to express them. Fear dominates them and keeps them from freedom.

It is a glorious feeling—the feeling of independence. The achievement of the sense of freedom is, perhaps, the greatest of all personal achievements.

CHEMISTRY AND BUSINESS

While he spoke before the Institute of American Meat Packers in Chicago a few days ago, E. W. Howe, editor of a trade journal, unwrapped a 40-pound parcel. It contained a cake of ice shipped in a fibre carton 30 hours before from New York. Instead of turning into water it melted slowly into gas. This ice had a temperature of 114 degrees below zero. If it touched the human hand it would cause a blister. This ice was made in a chemical laboratory. The packers were interested. Big business watches chemistry. Chemistry has a great message for industrial civilization.

CHRISTIANITY

A noteworthy—and sad—characteristic of the church is the lack of Christianity among average members. The preachers are far ahead of the pews. They must often feel discouraged. Christianity is a way of life, a manner of thinking and doing and living. Thousands of church members don't know it. Thousands of church members are not Christians. They are narrow, intolerant, bigoted, cruel, egotistic, and thoroughly unkind. If they were put out of the church by the pastor, as many of them deserve to be, their feelings would be hurt. They have no sense of their own failure.

If Christianity does not mean the growth and spread, and adoption by the individual, of a spirit of kindness it means nothing worth while and it is not worth keeping.

NEWS COMMENT AND VIEWS

The Daybook

Of A

New Yorker

By
Burton Rascoe

Exclusive Central Dispatch
NEW YORK, Nov. 16. A friend living in a neighboring Westchester town reports that he was arrested for a minor traffic violation and was given a summons to appear in the local court on the following Wednesday. Coming home at four in the morning, two days before the time for his appointment with the judge, he found a note left by his wife, which advised him to get in touch with police headquarters immediately.

So off our gentleman drove to the habitat of the local constabulary and gently inquired for what reason was he summoned.

"Where were you tonight?" asked the sergeant ominously.

"I was working," replied the hero of our tale. "I wasn't supposed to appear until Wednesday."

"Yet?" the officer snorted. "Let's see your summons."

The minion of the law scowled at this latter document for the time and observed that the time set was indeed Wednesday.

"Awright," he admitted grudgingly. "But be sure and be here on Wednesday. I guess there was some mix-up in the dates."

My friend promised that he would not fail and slunk home to bed. Which is the proper way of leaving or entering a police station—sinking, I mean. It has been my own, as well as others' experience, that the sergeant is always right.

The latest of some empty-unip movie versions of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" opened at the Central recently. Previous to the opening, the inspired press agent conducted a census among the newspaper critics and as a result he found, that only two confessed to reading Mrs. Stowe's novel. For some reason or other this was considered a sad state of affairs by the film producers and so, two days before the opening, each critic received a special movie edition of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," profusely illustrated with scenes from the new picture.

That's what you might call teaching your critics how to criticize.

And speaking of super-movie openings reminds me of the dodges used by the gentlemen in charge. Should you attend one of these premieres you will perhaps be frightened and certainly be flattered as you pass through a lane, lined with awe-struck, eager-eyed movie fans. They have no tickets; they are just waiting to see the stars go in. And believe me, no opening would be worth while without these lowly aids to the proper atmosphere. Now I learn that these are not voluntary star gazers. On the contrary they are hired for the night, to stand there with that look of awe on their faces, making the third assistant movie critic of the Mt. Vernon Clarion feel just a little more important than Adolph Zukor.

And did you hear the story about the man who was waiting for a friend in the lobby, at one of these events? No. Well, while waiting, he was surprised to find a photographer focusing his camera and taking flashlights of him at two minute intervals. Evidently, he thought, the photographer had mistaken him for one of the visiting great.

"Here, here, my man," he said. "I think you're making a mistake. I'm not the man you think you're photographing."

"I don't care who you are," the camera man replied. "I'm being paid to take a picture with a flashlight every two minutes and that's what I'm going to keep on doing. Get in the picture or get out of the way!"

And so saying he shot another flashlight.

"So what do you want?" is current Broadway repartee used as a biting comment on a pointless story.

Shipboard Impressions

I have always supposed that old, seasoned travelers would be some fellow from the country, setting out on his first trip across the Atlantic. But instead they show me only envy.

"You're lucky," they say, "to have the thrill of your first glimpse of Europe still coming to you. Never again can you hope to get the same kick out of it."

Few people, even those who easily become seasick, regard a sea voyage as a hardship. Nearly everybody seems to think that it's a great privilege to spend several days staring at the ocean. But a man who has had his own way and ready to take any advantage. The more I look at the ocean as we pull away from New York harbor, the more I feel that if any trouble arises, I can't count on much help from the ocean. I'll be

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

The Value of the Magnifying Mirror to Beauty

Sometimes I think that women would be twice as beautiful if they used mirrors that made them look twice as large. For in proportion as your defects are shown up, you increase your efforts to overcome them.

I wish girls who have blackheads would get mirrors that magnify triple, so that they would lose no time in banishing the unsightly and harmful blemishes.

A woman approaching middle age should watch herself closely in a magnifying mirror and as soon as she sees the first evidence of fine lines, should hasten to eradicate them before they grow into wrinkles. Similarly, she should carefully guard her contour against the droop. A mirror that accentuates your beauty faults magnifies your attention as well and makes you quicker to remedy them.

One particular magnifying mirror that is invaluable for beauty is the dental mirror. I advise every woman to have one of these in or near her bathroom. It is a close watch of her teeth and catch any cavity or trace of pyorrhea at the very start. It is also possible to see discolorations, especially the line along close to the gum, which might go unnoticed in an ordinary mirror but are nevertheless giving you an appearance of untidiness and causing harm to your teeth. A dental mirror will save you pain, money and teeth.

Good teeth are especially important to beauty, for a woman's greatest charm should be her smile. How often I have seen a girl who was very attractive until she opened her mouth and then her teeth became visible they completely ruined the picture. And remember, no matter how fine a set of false teeth you can get, it will never take the place of your own from a beauty point of view. False teeth can never put back the roots into the gums and fill out the open spaces. When your own natural teeth are gone, there is bound to be a certain amount of depression in the gums which gives the face an old look.

In my talks so far this week, I have spoken about different kinds of mirrors and how they can aid your beauty. Tomorrow I am going to tell you how to "Let One Mirror Aid the Other."

Peter's Adventures

By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent.

The Strange Umbrella Rack

By this time Mrs. Flittermouse and the boy were far away from the rest of the Bats, all by themselves, flying under the starlit sky. Suddenly Peter began to think of the time. How late it must be! The moon had rolled out of sight and a long while ago. How much anger was Mrs. Flittermouse going to hunt? One would think she would be all tired out—she had been just as well satisfied when we separate once more.

We're starting out in a fog. But none of the passengers appear much concerned. They seem willing enough to put up with fogs if only there is no rough sea. A ship officer chuckles good-humoredly at this.

"No sailor ever feels the slightest concern about rough sea," he says. "I don't care if I have a piece of mind in a fog. The captain doesn't always stay on the bridge in a mere storm, but you may rest assured that he's there now and will be until this fog lifts."

Most of us are always more excited about imaginary than about real dangers.

It is disappointing that the departure of a great ship isn't more dramatized. Those who come to say farewell to their friends gradually disappear, the gangplank is withdrawn and the ship without the slightest hubbub simply starts across the ocean. No stirring announcement marks the exact moment of sailing. (Funny how many out-of-date words still endure. We speak of a boat sailing and call its employees sailors even though it's a steamer, without one sail aboard.)

It seems as if the captain should appear in gay clothes, with bristling mustache, and megaphone the starting order while the ship band plays a stirring tune—something at least as dramatic as the fellow in advance of a circus parade bawling: "Hold your horses! The elephants are coming!"

I'd like to see what one of the Ringlings could do with a good ocean liner at sailing time.

flapping about for hours—but for all he could notice, the lively lady was quite as fresh as she had been at the start.

My, but he wished Mrs. Flittermouse would carry him down to earth. He was so weary he believed he could slumber under the shade of the milkweed leaves. Oh, dear! Now his foot was asleep! He didn't dare move, though, for fear he would fall. Oaah! He was slipping now. Down, down, down, down! Plump!

Sure enough, the poor boy had fallen—not from Mrs. Flittermouse's back, though—only off to sleep.

Peter opened his eyes with a start. Good gracious, it was daylight! What in the world made him feel so strange? His head—it ached dreadfully. Why, his head was lower than his feet—it must be, for he was staring straight down on the bare ground when he should have been looking up at the sky. He was upside down, just as sure as he was born! Where was he? What had happened? He was still on Mrs. Flittermouse's back, of that much he was sure! Peter leaned forward to look

MENU HINTS

It is not only necessary to count your calories in your daily menus, but it is even more necessary to count the pennies. Prices are high and families need so many things that the business of serving nourishing meals for a moderate sum ceases to become a job and a real art. Following is a day's menu that is economical as well as entablie:

BREAKFAST

Half a Grapefruit
Hot Cereal with Chopped Dates,
Top Milk
Toast and Orange Marmalade
Coffee

LUNCHEON

Cheese Rabbit with Beans
Chilled Fruit
Tea

DINNER

Baked Slice of Ham and Potatoes
Spinach
Parker House Rolls
Head Lettuce and Thousand
Island Dressing
Crisp Apple Scallop

Today's Recipes.

Cheese Rabbit with Beans—One can tomato soup, one package snappy cheese, one can black kidney beans, Mix, heat, add one egg. Serve hot on toast.

Baked Ham and Potatoes—Cover the bottom of a baking dish with sliced potatoes. Sprinkle with a little flour, salt pepper. Place on top of potatoes a fairly thick slice of ham, stick with cloves, sprinkle with brown sugar, cover with milk and bake in moderate oven one hour.

Thousand Island Dressing—A delicious and easy dressing is made by adding India relish and catsup to plain mayonnaise.

Crisp Apple Scallop—Pare, core and slice six apples. Place in a greased casserole and cover with a mixture of one-half cup water, one-fourth teaspoon cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoon nutmeg, one teaspoon lemon juice. Work together with fingertips until crumblike in consistency: one cup sugar, three-fourths cup flour, one-half cup butter. Spread over apples and bake uncovered in moderate oven for 30 minutes. Serve with whipped cream.

about him and came within an inch of losing his balance, but he found out what he wanted to know. Mrs. Flittermouse had hung herself head down from the limb of a tree, clinging fast with the large hooked claws on her hind feet, and her eyes were closed.

Peter laughed. Mrs. Flittermouse had hung herself upon a limb just as one would dangle an umbrella from the back of a chair. The boy poked the Bat in the back.

"Hey, wake up, old lady!" cried he. "Tis broad daylight—time for anyone to be up and doing." Mrs. Flittermouse paid no attention to time for Bats to be stirring, and since Mrs. Flittermouse had flown the boy remembered night was the time she would want to rest in the sun.

Poor thing! She was tired out! She had been kind to him, she would not be cruel to her by disturbing her. Cautiously Peter chambered to the ground—Mrs. Flittermouse never moved a muscle—and walked softly away, leaving the queer umbrella hanging on its rack.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—A fiction writer who wanted to portray the very mental and bodily type of a "big navy" member of congress couldn't find a better model than Representative Fred A. Britten of Illinois.

In the first place, that's just what Britten is—the biggest of the big ones.

Next after Chairman Thomas S. Butler, he's senior majority member of the house naval affairs committee, and for bigness of ideas, he throws even Butler into the shade.

All he wants is thirty new 10,000-ton cruisers, at $10 million per cruiser, plus two new 32,500-ton aircraft carriers, at $35 million per carrier, or 400 millions all told, in the next ten years.

That's more than all the other twenty members of the naval affairs committee, put together, have had the nerve to ask yet.

Britten's a large man, in the prime of life and, obviously, the acme of physical trim—an athlete and amateur boxer of renown. Unusually, he could take on any two rival members of congress—not even barring Battling Tom Blanton from the list—and knock 'em into a cocked hat at the same time.

Jovial of voice and manner, nevertheless he speaks with a voice of authority, acquired, perhaps, in his calling as a building contractor. For Britten's none of your puny lawyers—his business is out of doors.

A student?—no, you wouldn't pick him for that. But force, vitality, pep—these radiate all all three. A man of action!—all through.

In short, he was made to order for a "big navy man."

Chicago, with her "git thar" ways, is an appropriate city for him to hail from—as he does.

That England has outbuilt the United States in the cruiser class of fighting ships, since the 5-powers' naval limitation treaty was signed in 1922, irks Britten sorely.

He's determined we must catch up, and then get in the lead, building at the hottest clip we can.

Won't it simply start another naval race?

You can see by the Chicago congressman's expression that he doesn't care a hoot if it does, but his opinion is that the British will be better advised.

Then he doesn't believe their

question for some girl:

"Dear Broken Hearted lonely: I am impelled to write you after reading your story, because it is so much like my own. My mother had the old-fashioned, mistaken idea that it was not proper to talk of sex matters, even with her own daughters. As a result I had the same misfortune to which you refer. No one in our small town ever knew anything about it, but I worried about what I would do when the right man came along and whether he would forgive my mistake."

"About three years after this happened he came, and we were so much in love that I never thought of anything but our plan. Then one day, shortly before our marriage, he made a remark that paved the way for a complete confession. He freely forgave me and we are still sweethearts after being married 15 years. We have four lovely children and no one could be happier. So please don't be downhearted. I had the same misfortune to which you refer. Central Plays Final Home Game Friday

The most determined week of practice this season for Central High School's football squad is under way this week as the Blue and White prepares confidently for victory in its final home game of the season.

The University of Dayton Preps is the opponent Friday afternoon and a defeat of the "Baby Flyers" will make the season a success, regardless of the outcome of other contests.

Determination to win Friday is written on the countenance of every member of the team and Coach Victor Kolb is in a happier frame of mind as a result.

The Central High mentor is working to bring about some degree of perfection to the offense but is not neglecting the defense as well.

The squad came through the Troy contest unscathed except for bruises and a general soreness and the local eleven will not be handicapped by injuries in the Preps game.

The Dayton school displayed strength in defeating Catholic High of Hamilton, last week, and must not be regarded lightly, but Xenia gridders are hopeful victory will reward their efforts this week-end and insure at least an even break in the season's schedule of games.

Friday's contest will start promptly at 3 o'clock with competent officials in charge.

FIRST PICTURE OF SANTA THIS SEASON ON CHRISTMAS SEAL

Upon the 1927 Christmas Seal is printed the first authorized photograph of Santa Claus to appear this Christmas-tide. The jolly old gentleman seems hale and hearty as ever as he drives over a snow-covered landscape behind his speeding reindeer team.

Under the midnight blue of the sky the pines are spangled with icicles and against the white background of the trees shines the double-barred cross, the symbol of the international fight against tuberculosis.

In the back of Santa's green sleigh sacks filled with dolls and dolls and boxes and sealed with Christmas Seals are piled high. For with his other presents Santa Claus is bringing the good gift of sunshine, fresh air and food, doctors, nurses and sanatorium beds for hundreds who have contracted tuberculosis and are fighting a gallant battle for life and health. He is bringing protection against the disease to families gathered around fireplaces in humble cottages and splendid mansions. And he is bringing a promise of the day when the great white plague shall have become only a memory.

Fifty million Christmas Seals will be placed on sale in Ohio the morning after Thanksgiving. The quota of Greene County is 150,000. Mrs. W. H. Finley, of Xenia, is the seal sale chairman of this county.

MERCHANTS TO MEET OSBORN FORDS HERE

Encouraged by their overwhelming victory over Piqua last Sunday the Xenia Merchants will engage in strenuous practice every night this week in preparation for the scheduled game with the Osborn Fords at Washington Park Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Physically, the local eleven came through the Piqua contest in good condition and will not be handicapped by injuries Sunday.

The Osborn team formerly known as the Osborn Indians, is annually strong and should make things interesting for the Merchants Sunday.

Robert Shoup, son of Attorney and Mrs. Marcus Shoup, E. Main St., is a member of the University of Dayton Preps football squad, which comes to Xenia Friday for a game with Central High School. Shoup, a junior at the Dayton prep school, may participate in the game as he has been working hard for a berth on the "Baby Flyers" eleven and has played in several games this season.

BOWLING

The Greene County Lumber Co. quintet strengthened its grip on second place in the Recreation League by defeating Lang Transfers two out of three games Tuesday night. Winners also established a new league record by amassing a three-game total of 2,844. This exceeds by sixteen pins the former record held by the Fords, and established the preceding night.

The lumber company rolled games of 966, 977 and 901, losing the final game by fourteen pins. Blackburn, anchor man for the winners, again broke into the spotlight by rolling an excellent three-game series of 642. He had games of 201, 240 and 201. W. C. Horner and Whittington were tied with 549 each for the losers. Box score:

SIMISON DAMAGE TRIAL IS RESUMED

Trial of the $50,000 damage suit of John Simison, Dayton Ave., as administrator of the estate and father of Eleanor Simison, deceased, against the Pennsylvania Railroad, based on a grade crossing crash a year ago in which the plaintiff's daughter was killed instantly was begun Tuesday in United States District Court in Dayton, which resumed session, following a one-half day's recess, with Judge Smith Hickenlooper presiding.

Patrolmen Ed Craig and Charles Thompson and Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman, subpoenaed as witnesses in the case, testified at the opening session Tuesday.

THEY FINISH HOME SEASON

With eleven seniors playing their school gridiron after next week's last high school game of football against Springfield next week, Coach Vic Kolb of Central High finds some solace in the fact that his backfield will not be entirely riddled.

Two boys whom Coach Kolb expects to depend on next year are John Gibeau, fullback and Bob Adair, quarterback, both of whom are juniors. Both of these lads have shown themselves to be able performers in their first year of regular varsity competition this year and they constitute a nucleus for the new offense Central's mentor must build up next year.

Buell, another junior, is a third man in the backfield and has proven so capable at one of the halves this season, that he is being counted on rather heavily for next year. Captain Bob Morton, senior and halfback, will retire from the high team.

NO "SILENT NIGHT"

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.—Chicago radio fans today were singing "good-bye to silent night." Following a meeting of officials of local broadcasting stations, spokesmen announced the practice of observing Monday night as "silent night" for the benefit of "long distance fans" would be discontinued and that starting the first of the week seven day programs would be furnished.

Night Coughs Quickly Relieved

Stopped in 15 Minutes With Thoxine
Most coughing is caused by an irritated, inflamed throat or bronchial tubes which cough syrups and patent medicines do not touch. But a famous physician's prescription recently discovered called Thoxine goes direct to the cause, relieves the inflamed membranes and stops the cough almost instantly. One swallow does the work, and the remarkable thing about it is that it contains no dope, chloroform or other harmful drugs. Pleasant and lasting relief for children. Once used the whole family will rely on it. 35c, 60c, and $1.00. Sold by Sohn's Drug Store and all good drug stores. —Adv.

LUCKY NICKEL!

A Good Cigar Need Cost No More. Here's How and Why

You've heard about five-centers that "should cost more." You can't be blamed for wondering if there is such a thing. You won't wonder any more if you will shoot one lucky nickel. You'll know and you'll tell the world.

The nickel you put down for a Havana Ribbon means smoke luck from the first puff. It means mildness and mellowness and all-day satisfaction. It means you can keep right on smoking Havana Ribbon cigars and like them better all the time. You'll say, "How can they make it so good?"

Here's how. Havana Ribbon sold at more than a nickel for years. Men liked them. They sold like hot cakes by the million. Volume production brought the price down. That's the whole story. So drop in at the nearest cigar store armed with one nickel only. And get set for a real surprise.

We know what we like, don't we, Old Pipe!

PRINCE ALBERT, and plenty of it, huh? Well, we can justify that on any number of counts. It's more than mere preference. There are sound reasons for liking Prince Albert above anything else.

Take fragrance, for instance. P.A. has 'em all stopped there. Every time I open the tidy red tin, I get a brand-new thrill. A tobacco that smells like that would have to be good, if you ask me. Yes, Sir!

And then take taste. Every puff tells a man that P.A. is cool and refreshing, with a mellow-mildness that is a revelation. Mild, yes, but not wishy-washy. P.A.'s rich, full-bodied flavor balances its mildness and makes it a smoke!

But all the talk in the world won't do a man any good, unless he acts on it. A load of long-burning P.A. in the bowl of his pipe will tell him volumes—and in language he likes. It's the personal test that counts, after all. I don't believe I can add to that.

PRINCE ALBERT
—the national joy smoke!

Not only quality, but quantity, too—TWO full ounces in every tin.

HELD TO GRAND JURY ON ASSAULT CHARGE

James Carpenter, 37, tenant on the W. J. Bootes farm, Hook Road, was bound over to the grand jury under $300 bond on a charge of assault with intent to wound by R. O. Copey, justice of the peace, Tuesday. Carpenter had pleaded guilty.

Following an attack upon his stepson, Raymond Angel, Thursday, Carpenter was arrested by Sheriff Ohmer Tate and O. H. Cornwell, county road patrolman.

SCOUTING

Attention of members of Troop No. 41, Boy Scouts of America, is called by Deputy Scout Commissioner R. H. Kingsbury to a meeting at the new Scout cabin Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock. Registration of Scouts for the coming year is the scheduled business of the meeting and a full attendance is desired.

ORDINANCE NO. 334

FOR THE PROTECTION OF PERSONS WHOSE BUSINESS INCLUDES THE LOANING OR RENTING OF ELECTRIC STORAGE BATTERIES.

Be it ordained by the Commission of the City of Xenia, Ohio:

SECTION 1. As used in this ordinance the words "rental battery" is defined as an electric storage battery loaned, rented, or furnished for temporary use by any person, firm or corporation engaging in the business of buying, selling, repairing or recharging electric storage batteries.

SECTION 2. It is unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to mark any such rental battery belonging to them with the words "rental" printed, painted or stamped upon such battery together with such words as shall identify such batteries as the property of the person, firm or corporation so marking the same.

SECTION 3. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to so mark any such rental battery which are not the property of such person, firm or corporation.

SECTION 4. It is unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to remove, deface, alter, or destroy, the word "rental" or any rental battery or any other word, mark or character printed, painted or stamped upon any rental battery to identify the same as belonging to or being the property of any person, firm or corporation.

SECTION 5. It is unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to retain in his, her or its possession for a longer period than ten (10) days, without the written consent of the owner, any rental battery marked as such by the owner thereof as provided by Section 1 of this ordinance.

SECTION 6. Any person, firm or corporation, employees, and members of any firm or corporation violating any of the provisions of this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding one hundred ($100.00) dollars or be imprisoned for a term of not exceeding ninety (90) days, or both, at the discretion of the Court.

SECTION 7. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after the earliest period allowed by law.

S. M. McKay, President City Commission.

Attest: T. H. Zell, Clerk City Commission.

Pat grinned sheepishly, and actually blushed as he began to open a tin of sardines with his pocket knife. He kept his eyes on it as he answered Lily's question.

"Why, I don't know how to tell you who Elizabeth Ertz is. She's just—Elizabeth Ertz," he said awkwardly. She's a trained nurse and a great friend of Sadye Jetterson's. An awfully nice, sensible sort of girl."

"Yes, but that's not what I want to know," Lily fixed him with her large, luminous gray eyes. "What I want to know is how she knows enough about me to talk me over with those Pettersons. She's never seen me—she doesn't know me!"

"She's seen you," said Pat, pouring coffee from the thermos bottle into two cups. "You remember a girl who was talking to me one day when you came up to my cab? A short little girl with big blue eyes?"

Lily nodded. "A golden plume in her hair, like a golden plume in the sun that came sifting down through the new green leaves above them."

"Yes, I remember her," she said, and then asked sarcastically: "She has beautiful big blue eyes, has she, Pat?" "You've noticed them, haven't you?"

She remembered how she had asked him questions about the small plain girl the day she had found her talking to him, and how he had refused to answer them. She remembered how jealous she had been that day—and she was jealous now in just the same way.

"She's a great friend of yours as well as the Jettersons, isn't she?" she asked, and Pat nodded. "A man very often is as transparent as a sheet of glass to a woman—particularly if he is in love with her, as Pat France was with Lily. And so she saw through him without half trying."

"You've been going around with her for a long time, haven't you?" she wanted to know. "You and she and the Jettersons must have had jolly times together—the four of you."

"We have," said Pat, miserably, and then came out with the whole truth, as if he were tired of being cross-questioned. "And I'd probably have married her if I hadn't happened to see you that rainy day in Alabama street. We'd been going around together for nearly two years—she and I."

"And have you gone around with her much since then?" Pat shook his handsome head, with its crisp waves of unruly hair. "I've never telephoned her since or made a date with her," he answered, huskily. "That's how she happened to come down town to see me that day when you saw us. She wondered what was the matter with me. Thought I must be sick or dead or something. I'd forgotten all about her, to tell the truth."

Lily studied him with narrowed eyes as he broke a roll in two, buttered it and ate it hungrily. "Would you go back to her if I married Staley Drummond?" Pat shook his head. "No, I wouldn't but you're going to marry Mrs. Cain," he said. "And she said bitterly, 'It's the thing for you to do, and you know it—just as I know it.'"

"Do you want me to?" Lily sat down on the grass beside him and put her warm flushed cheek against his and her arms around him. She was perfectly frank and unashamed in her love for him. And then he turned suddenly and seized her in his arms, holding her so close that it was hard for her to breathe. He kissed her and kissed her again.

He stopped for a second—long enough to murmur: "This is how I want you to marry him!" Then he kissed her again with rough tenderness all over her face and her hair and her neck, and Lily lay back in his arms and thought of Staley Drummond's kisses and how cold they had left her, always.

"I can't marry him, Pat—not if you want me," she said when he had let her go, and they sat looking at each other, their hands clasped on the fresh young grass that spread around them in a carpet of living green.

"You can't marry me, either. I can see that—more plainly now than ever before," Pat told her after a long pause. "No matter how much we care about each other, Lily, there are things that would always keep us from being happy."

"What?" Pat laughed. Well, things like Sadye Jetterson's clothes. You don't like the way she dresses, and so you call her terrible and wild-looking. But to me, Sadye Jetterson is the salt of the earth. She's a wonderful housekeeper, she's crazy about her husband and her children, she has the most hospitable heart I ever saw. It's a sort of second home to me. And the Jettersons are people you'd have to see lots of if you were married to me."

Lily kicked at the grass with the heel of her pink-and-white slippers. "I shouldn't have said what I did about the woman. She's probably just as nice as you say she is. And Pat, you talk as if I were a snob. I'm not. I fell in love with you when you were in a chauffeur's uniform. I'm in love with you now when you're in a chauffeur's uniform that my mother bought for you, and I'd love you just the same if you were in a convict's stripes!"

Pat took out his little French briar pipe and began to fill it. He stared down into the bowl as if he were a sand-digger reading the future in its tobacco-scented depths.

"Yeah," he remarked, slowly and thoughtfully, "but after we'd been married for a while, and all the glamour was gone from me, how would you like being married to a poor mechanic who works all day in Roy Jetterson's garage, tinkering at cabs and touring cars, and came home at night with grease on his overalls and under his nails? Who couldn't take you anywhere but to the picture show or over to the Jettersons to play cards? Staley Drummond and his cars and that big house of his would look pretty slick to you then, eh, Sister?"

"It would not, and don't call me 'Sister,' said Lily, because I'll never be a sister to you. I'm going to marry you, Pat or know the reason why."

"I'll have to have something to

GAS USED IN CHEMICAL WARFARE EXPLAINED TO KIWANIS CLUB

An attempt to explain the great misunderstanding concerning the use of gas in warfare, was made by Dr. C. S. Adams, professor of chemistry, Antioch College, Yellow Springs, who addressed the Xenia Kiwanis Club at the Elks' Club, Tuesday evening on the subject "Chemical Warfare and Poisonous Gas."

Dr. Adams was connected with the research department of chemical warfare during the World War and has been gassed a number of times in his laboratory work.

"Gas is bad enough, but in comparison is not as bad as shot and shell," Dr. Adams told the club.

He reviewed the history of the discovery of times of any sort in warfare, being first used in the Greco-Trojan Wars and off and on down to the present day, the Germans being the first to use it in the war.

The Allies retaliated in kind as soon as they could produce.

"The Germans used first great quantities of chlorine gas, which caused strangulation, which is horrible," he said. "But to 'prepared' men the casualty list is comparatively negative. Before gas masks were perfected there was a 30 per cent casualty and after the gas mask one or two per cent. Not only that, but every one is prejudiced to anything new in any way."

Dr. Adams explained the various types of gas, especially warfare. The speaker gave figures substantiating his contention that gas warfare is "prepared men" is less horrible than shot and shell.

Dr. Adams predicted that no matter what is done in the meanwhile, if there is another war, gases will be used to a large extent, because they are efficient, and can temporarily incapacitate the enemy without a large death list, and gain their ends.

The death list from shot and shell is 24.85 per cent, while from gas is 73 per cent, he said.

Those who are permanently disabled by shot and shell number one man in 40; for poison gas, one man in 200.

The speaker had samples of various gases and explained their use and effects. He took considerable time to make it clear that no gas had been found or could be found (according to chemical knowledge of poisonous compounds) that would eliminate a whole city by one bomb. Too many factors enter into question and no gas was discovered during the war which in any manner approximated any such deadline, he declared.

He gave a vivid description of the action of mustard gas, from which he had been poisoned several times.

He proved in closing that the development was towards the use of gas as more humane than shot and shell. A number of slides depicted the development of this branch of our war preparations.

Dr. Austin Patterson, W. R. Torrance and Theatrical White, were in charge of the meeting. Dr. Raymond McClellan gave a short talk on Christmas Seals urging all the men present to buy a large quota. He set forth the plans the present committee on seals has for next year.

THE ONLY WAY TO END INDIGESTION

Remove the Cause and You Remove the Pain

Nine-tenths of digestive troubles are caused by food fermentation and excess acid in the stomach, and is only by ending these conditions that permanent relief can be hoped for.

The quickest, safest, and surest way to do this is to take a little "Pape's Diapiesin" after eating or whenever pain is felt. This not only stops fermentation and neutralizes excess acid, but exerts a soothing, healing and strengthening influence on the weakened stomach, and induces normal healthy digestion.

That is why millions everywhere recommend "Pape's Diapiesin." Follow their sound advice—get a 60 cent package of "Pape's Diapiesin" from your druggist at once, and insure stomach health, with the fear of indigestion banished forever.

HOW CAN WOMEN KEEP WELL ENOUGH TO GET UP SINGING?

MRS. BELLE THOMPSON

Springtime streamed in through the open windows. The green fields of Georgia were harking in the sunshine. Somewhere a bird was trilling. It was a day to be happy.

But the pale woman at the table sighed and pushed away her plate. Nothing tasted right. She couldn't eat much. She couldn't sleep well either. She was so weak, it was hard to do her work. When the baby cried, she wanted to cry, too.

She had not been well for four years. Her husband watched her with a man's helpless expression. But his mother knew a remedy.

Another Happy Woman

"I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the little books you give away and began to take the medicine. After the first few bottles I began to feel better and could eat better and had fewer headaches. I feel like a different person. At anytime that I don't feel good I take the Vegetable Compound again, as I always keep a bottle on hand. You may use this letter for any word is true. I will answer any letters sent to me."

Mrs. J. B. BOLLERMAN, 611-11th St., Union City, N. J.

ELEVEN CITIES SEEK C. O. P. MEETING

M'NARY-HAUGEN BILL GAINS FAVOR AGAIN

PENDULUM OF FARM RELIEF SENTIMENT ON BACKWARD SWING

Farm Leaders Would Pass Plan Over Coolidge Veto

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The farm relief pendulum, after swinging toward several substitute plans, turned back today to the McNary-Haugen bill, with farm leaders predicting its enactment into law even over a presidential veto.

Although several other plans for financing surplus crops have been considered at a series of farm conferences during the past month, the agricultural spokesmen here apparently have reinstated the old equalization fee as the basis of farm relief legislation. The McNary-Haugen bill, it was said, will be reintroduced in both house and senate as soon as congress reconvenes and it will feature the equalization fee.

The preponderance of opinion among farm leaders leaned toward early enactment of the bill, including the equalization fee. They even boasted that the bill probably would be enacted over a presidential veto although this was not attempted a year ago when Mr. Coolidge disapproved an identical bill.

The farm leaders, however, declared there has been a change of heart on the part of some western and southern opponents of the equalization fee as a result of conferences with the "people back home."

They maintained there will be enough votes in the seventeenth congress to put the bill on the statute books, regardless of presidential disapproval.

Based on the far-fetched plan of government credits, this plan would establish huge credits for farmer's cooperatives, by which the farmers could hold their surplus crops off the world market until favorable prices were obtained. The congressional leaders thought will oppose this plan and expect to defeat it.

"I feel certain the McNary-Haugen bill will pass by a greater majority than before," Senator Watson (R) of Ind., predicted. "If the president vetoes it, I rather expect congress will enact it into law over his veto."

Leaders of the insurgent bloc held the same view.

"If the McNary-Haugen bill is reintroduced and it contains the equalization fee," observed Senator Norris (R) of Neb., insurgent leader, "I expect it will be enacted."

RITCHIE NOT AFTER 1928 NOMINATION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, is not an active candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination next year. He is for Gov. Al Smith of New York.

The Maryland executive made that clear in an address here last night before the Catholic Charities Convention, after Archbishop Curley had introduced him as "one of the outstanding men of the nation," and another speaker had mentioned him as "an ideal standard bearer for the Democrats in 1928."

"While I appreciate the compliment implied by associating my name with the high office of the presidency," said Gov. Ritchie, "the foremost governor of the foremost state in the union must be given first consideration in the Democratic nomination for the presidency."

Gov. Ritchie scored the policy of Washington in sending prohibition agents across the line into Maryland "to enforce the most sumptuary of all laws."

THOMAS JEFFERSON GRANTED DIVORCE

RENO, Nev., Nov. 16.—Thomas L. Jefferson, veteran actor, today must have had poignant memories of the role he played so often in Frank Bacon's play "Lightnin'." Charging cruelty, Jefferson was granted a divorce here yesterday from his wife to whom he had been married forty-eight years.

In the play, however, it was "Lightnin'" Bill Jones who was named defendant in the divorce action, and a reconciliation and happy ending marked the climax of the drama.

The elderly mummer quietly recounted the basis of his charges, told of the purported cruelty of his wife and recounted how she objected to the love scenes he portrayed as the key character in the stage presentation of the famous play revolving around a divorce action.

The couple have three children, all of them of age.

BUYING HOLIDAY NEARS

Xenia merchants were drawing up their battle lines Wednesday prepared to fire the first shot early Thursday morning in what is promised to be the biggest buying feast in years—the Dollar Day being sponsored by the Xenia Retail Merchants' Association.

Guaranteed bargain offers composed the principal guns to be used Thursday, for a committee of the association censored every special bargain offered and their inspection insured the buying public bona fide values at ridiculously low prices.

In addition to the dollar specials many of the merchants are making especially attractive offers on other merchandise, including generous price-slashing on higher-priced goods. Members of the organization predicted Wednesday that with clement weather prevailing Xenia stores will be bombed by the biggest buying rush in years.

This prediction was based on the fact that these bargain offers are not being offered at the end of the season, when merchandise moves slowly, but during the most sanguine buying season of the year, the time just before Christmas.

DEATH LIST MOUNTS WHEN OHIO HUNTERS BEGIN OPEN SEASON

Necessity Of Caution Urged As Casualty List Increases

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 16.—Ohio today was checking its list of dead and wounded resulting from a concerted and continuous shotgun barrage which has been in progress on all fronts since Tuesday, the first day of hunting season.

The death toll was mounting today and authorities urge that hunters exercise every precaution to avoid accidents.

Batavia—George W. Corbin, 40, farmer, was killed Tuesday by an accidental discharge from a gun carried by Tom Rose, of Hamilton.

Loveland—Frank Corwin, 30, farmer, was accidentally killed Tuesday by a hunting companion.

Marion—Hugh Davis, 79, died of heart failure and over-exertion shortly after starting out to hunt Tuesday.

Donalson—Donald Staley, 34, was shot in the right foot while climbing a fence.

Wooster—R. T. Menuez, 19, is in a serious condition after being accidentally shot by his father.

Columbus—Patrick Giblin, 35, of Cleveland, is suffering from wounds that will result in the loss of his right eye suffered when his gun was accidentally discharged while hunting near here late Tuesday.

Lancaster—Ernest Rhymer, 20, of Columbus, is suffering from slight wounds received when he was shot by a stranger near here Tuesday.

NUNS AND CHILDREN IMPERILLED IN FIRE

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Nov. 16.—Fire of undetermined origin which imperilled the lives of forty-three nuns and seventy-five children at Mount Mercy Academy here was brought under control early today after it had raged two hours and caused loss of probably $100,000.

One three-story building, a remodeled farm house used as music conservatory and also as a dormitory for the sisters, was destroyed, the nuns leaving most of their personal belongings in their haste to get the children out of a large dormitory adjoining when it appeared this would take fire also.

The children were cared for in nearby homes until the flames, discovered about midnight, were brought under control. Later most of them returned to their quarters.

DEMOCRAT WINNER IN COLORADO RACE

DENVER, Nov. 16.—Judge S. Harrison White, a Democratic candidate on a Volstead modification platform, was elected to congress today by a vote of 4,720 majority over his nearest rival, State Senator Francis J. Knauss, Republican.

The special election yesterday was held to fill the seat left vacant by the death of William N. Valle.

DELAYS TRIP AGAIN

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 16.—Adverse weather conditions at sea today were still forestalling the plans of Captain Frederick A. Giles, British airman, to fly from here to Australia, via Hawaii and other Pacific points.

"SCARFACE AL" CAPONE DETHRONED

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.—The underworld's throne room, wherein "his majesty," "Scarface Al" Capone, has been pictured as lounging amid the glitter of steel-blue rifle and machine gun barrels while directing the destiny of Chicago's gambling trust, was empty today.

For "King" Capone has abdicated. His fall from power, reports have it, was hastened by the intensive police drive against gambling.

Capone, authorities say, was the overlord of this particular vice in Chicago and environs, just as he was ruler of the illicit alcohol traffic.

But the "alky" racket had become a bit too nerve wracking, even for the redoubtable Capone, so he began to concentrate on gambling. His chief lieutenant, police say, was one James Mondl, who was given blanket authority to "okay" new places of chance wherever and whenever he thought the investment would prove profitable.

Mondl, it is said, became a little too ambitious and so many places were opened that business went into an awful slump. The proprietors of the new places began to complain. Just then the police did on gambling was ordered and all places were closed.

The disgruntled proprietors blamed Capone and Mondl. The gambling clique had become so powerful, it was said, they were able to overthrow both Capone and Mondl. Capone surprised the group by agreeing to abdicate quietly, taking Mondl out with him.

Thus the feared "Scarface Al" who used to say it with bullets, stepped down and out without a struggle.

Meanwhile the gamblers have adjourned to Hot Springs and West Baden to elect a new leader and await "political readjustments" in Chicago that will permit the reopening of the palaces of chance.

STATISTICS PROVE
BOOKS CIRCULATED
AT BRANCH STATION

The first statistics relative to the use of books placed throughout the county by the County District Library have just been obtained.

The two branches at Yellow Springs and Wilberforce lead the list with 742 books circulated at Yellow Springs and 349 at Wilberforce. This is an increase of more than 50 per cent over the previous months' figures at Yellow Springs and 84 per cent for Wilberforce. The big increase at Wilberforce is accounted for by the fact that the branch did not open until late in September and a full month's work was not done until October.

The deposit stations all reported a brisk trade. Of the deposit stations, Zimmerman was far in the lead with a circulation of 117 for the month. Four hundred and sixty two books circulated from the eight deposit stations while one high school collection had a circulation of 167. Other school collections were not counted.

One thousand, seven hundred and ten books was the total circulation in the county from branches and deposit stations. County borrowers at the main library helped to swell the circulation there to 6,150 which is more than 100 more than circulated during October, 1926.

FINED FOR LEAVING
UN-LIGHTED TRUCK

Pleading guilty to a charge of operating a truck not equipped with a tail light, Raymond C. Frye, Dayton, O., was fined $15 and costs by R. O. Consey, justice of the peace, Tuesday.

Frye was arrested last Friday night by O. H. Cornwell, county road patrolman, after motorists had complained that a truck had been left standing on the Springfield Pike after dark, in violation of the state law which prohibits parking of vehicles on public highways.

Several accidents were reported to have been narrowly averted because the truck did not display lights.

Frye declared the motor went "dead" about 4 o'clock. The driver left the truck along the road and the vehicle was unguarded from 4 to 7:30 p. m., authorities stated.

Three charges were placed against the driver, namely, blocking the road, driving a car equipped with but one license, and operating a car without a tail light, but the first two were dismissed, after Frye had explained his position.

Answers to Mothers

God could not be everywhere; therefore He made mothers. — Jewish Proverb.

Notes on Teeth

Perhaps there is nothing that will make an expectant mother realize the importance of her diet any more than knowing that all of the baby's first teeth and the germs (beginnings) of the upper and lower first grinders are partially calcified at the time of birth. (The germ of the remaining permanent teeth, with the exception of the third molars or grinders, are present at birth.)

If the mother's diet does not contain sufficient lime and other elements necessary for the teeth and bone development, Nature seems to have designed that the baby is going to get some of them from the mother's own bones and teeth. It is for this reason that the mother's teeth soften and decay so rapidly during pregnancy, and the expression "For every child, a tooth" which used to be quoted, is based on this. I'm not going into the diet during pregnancy in this article, for we have one on the subject if you are interested. (Enclose a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.)

Cutting teeth is a physiologic process and should not be accompanied by any serious difficulty. Too often children may be rather seriously ill and the cause for it may be laid to the teeth. Occasionally there may be some disorder, which is due to the teeth, but you must find out first if there isn't some other cause.

Lancing of the gums used to be practiced more often than it is now, but it is often unsuccessful, for the cut heals too rapidly. Sometimes, if the edge of the tooth is just about to erupt, rubbing it and pressing it through may be effective.

Irregularity in position of the teeth is due to overcrowding, and

PARALYZED MAN IS ACCUSED OF ATTACK
ON STEP-DAUGHTER

William Hicks, 35, colored, 765 E. Church St., who is paralyzed on the right side, was bound over to the grand jury by Mayor John W. Prugh on a statutory charge Wednesday morning. He pleaded guilty and in default of $1,000 bond, was committed to the County Jail.

The offense was committed November 8 on his step-daughter, Ella Raspberry, 15, a minor, according to an affidavit filed by his wife, Eliza Hicks. Hicks confessed, according to police.

Mrs. Hicks told Police Chief M. E. Graham her husband threatened to shoot her at their home Tuesday afternoon about 6 o'clock when she accused him of being intimate with his step-daughter.

She declared that he ran into the house and returned with a .22 caliber revolver in his pocket. Mrs. Hicks started to walk away from the house but her husband shouted for her to come back, under a threat that he would shoot, she said.

Police were told Mrs. Hicks reached for the gun and in the ensuing struggle, both fell to the ground, the revolver dropping out of Hicks' pocket. Mrs. Hicks succeeded in picking up the weapon and her husband attempted to bite her on the right arm she said. Using the weapon as a club, she struck him on the head with the revolver, momentarily stunning him, and then ran to Police Headquarters.

Hicks recovered from the blow and followed his wife to headquarters. After both had been questioned, Hicks was locked up. The Hicks family has been living in Xenia for the last six months, coming here from Dayton. They lived in Alabama eight years ago and later moved to Newark, O., and then Dayton. Police learned Hicks was involved in a shooting affray while living in Newark.

The shooting took place at the mine at night. McGill was captain of a trench mortar outfit overseas in the world war.

HEALTH
HINTS
For Parents

Here's a way to make the most delicate boy hale and hearty, and "hard as nails." A way to build his body, and put on weight. Heed this hint, and no boy or girl of yours need ever take another cathartic!

Most ailments of children begin with being bilious; and the trouble then and there, with a spoonful of California Fig Syrup. Nothing stronger, nothing else. The bowels will do their duty without using force! If your children have already contracted the laxative habit, fig syrup will wean them away from it.

California Fig Syrup is a purely vegetable product. It will do any child a world of good; it is, in fact, a very wonderful conditioner for children or adults. Its rich, fruity flavor is so delicious, it's no hardship to take! Nor can it harm even an infant! Only one caution: be sure to get the genuine California Fig Syrup; don't neglect to say "California." It isn't expensive — sixty cents for a generous bottle at all dealers.

Try California Fig Syrup two weeks on any child, and let his altered appearance and actions tell the full story. —Adv.

As well command the sun to stand still as children to stop growing up. They will be men and women before you know it—and only in photographs can you keep them as they are today.

Have them photographed now—before the busy Christmas season. Their pictures will solve many of your gift problems.

MAKING THE HEART GROW FONDER

Many of our thinkers believe the American family is losing its hold as a social influence. They note that many people spend only a small amount of time in their homes, and they use the home as a place only to sleep and take some of their meals in.

Yet it was remarked at a recent conference of social workers held at Buffalo, N. Y., on the problems of family life, that it is an extremely difficult thing to break up any family. Social workers will say that when they try to take care of children who are not being properly brought up, the parents are apt to make the most serious kind of objections, and fight such proceedings very bitterly. Parents seem to be just as much attached to their children as ever before, and they will raise the most strenuous objections if anyone tries to separate them. Family life will never be broken up as long as this attachment exists.

Some may say that the children do not return this attachment. But while we hear of many boys and girls running away, yet in former years many boys used to run away to go out into frontier regions or to go to sea.

Owing to entertainments, automobiles, sports, etc., people may not stay in their homes as much as formerly. Also there are many who do not seem to take any particular pains to have their children brought up right. But the family gathers three times a day for meals, and the children can be depended upon to turn up then. If the parents have any firmness or moral principle, they still have plenty of opportunity to impress good ideas on those roving youngsters of theirs. And the pains which people take to keep up and beautify their homes, shows that they care more about family life than some realize.

GIRLS SEEKING FAME OR FUN

The Los Angeles juvenile court was asked to search for 700 missing girls the past year. Many of them hoped to get into the movies. Their reasons for disappearing are classified as follows: Adventure, dislike for discipline, desire for careers, love affair with youth of whom family disapproved, fear of disgrace.

Into every large city such girls come, hoping for success in the entertainment or business world. If a girl has talent, she can get recognition without leaving home, and then the opportunities come naturally. But if she merely plunges into some big city without some sure position, she is jumping off into thin air. Thousands of these girls annually, some of them from Ohio, go down into careers of misery because they would not take advice.

VITAL PARTS OF MODERN LIFE

The public service corporations and the daily and weekly newspapers are brothers under the skin, both being public utilities serving the American people with an essential service at a remarkably low cost, due to quantity production.

Of the two it would be impossible to say which is the most essential. The newspapers and the major utilities — light, power, gas, telephone and street railway, probably serve about the same number of customers.

It would be a monumental catastrophe if either the utilities or the newspapers should discontinue service for a single day. Both are a vital part of modern life. In one year public utilities spent approximately $25,000,000 for advertising, of which 63 per cent was used in the newspapers.

The Way of the World

BE YOUR OWN MAN

The most worth while achievement in life is the achievement of freedom. Freedom in the right sense does not mean to be without a job—working for nobody, belonging to nothing. Freedom is a matter of being sure of oneself and being without fear. Most men and women are hedged in and made in and made miserable by fears. They fear people for whom they work or with whom they are associated. They fear public opinion. They fear to have convictions and to express them. Fear dominates them and keeps them from freedom.

It is a glorious feeling—the feeling of independence. The achievement of the sense of freedom is, perhaps, the greatest of all personal achievements.

CHEMISTRY AND BUSINESS

While he spoke before the Institute of American Meat Packers in Chicago a few days ago, E. W. Howe, editor of a trade journal, unwrapped a 40-pound parcel. It contained a cake of ice shipped in a fibre carton 30 hours before from New York. Instead of turning into water it melted slowly into gas. This ice had a temperature of 114 degrees below zero. If it touched the human hand it would cause a blister. This ice was made in a chemical laboratory. The packers were interested. Big business watches chemistry. Chemistry has a great message for industrial civilization.

CHRISTIANITY

A noteworthy—and sad—characteristic of the church is the lack of Christianity among average members. The preachers are far ahead of the pews. They must often feel discouraged. Christianity is a way of life, a manner of thinking and doing and living. Thousands of church members don't know it. Thousands of church members are not Christians. They are narrow, intolerant, bigoted, cruel, egotistic, and thoroughly unkind. If they were put out of the church by the pastor, as many of them deserve to be, their feelings would be hurt. They have no sense of their own failure.

If Christianity does not mean the growth and spread, and adoption by the individual, of a spirit of kindness it means nothing worth while and it is not worth keeping.

Exclusive Central Dispatch

NEW YORK, Nov. 16. — A friend living in a neighboring Westchester town reports that he was arrested for a minor traffic violation and was given a summons to appear in the local court on the following Wednesday. Coming home at four in the morning, two days before the time for his appointment with the judge, he found a note left by his wife, which advised him to get in touch with police headquarters immediately.

So off our gentleman drove to the habitat of the local constabulary and gently inquired for what reason he was summoned.

"Where were you tonight?" asked the sergeant ominously.

"I was working," replied the hero of our tale. "I wasn't supposed to appear until Wednesday."

"Yet?" the officer snorted.

"Let's see your summons."

The minion of the law scowled at this latter document for some time and observed that the time set was indeed Wednesday.

"Aright," he admitted grudgingly. "But be sure and be here on Wednesday. I guess there was some mix-up in the dates."

My friend promised that he would not fail and slunk home to bed. Which is the proper way of leaving or entering a police station—slinking, I mean. It has been my own, as well as others' experience, that the sergeant is always right.

The latest of some empty-ump movie versions of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" opened at the Central recently. Previous to the opening, the inspired press agent conducted a census among the newspaper critics and as a result he found, that only two confessed to reading Mrs. Stowe's novel. For some reason or other this was considered a sad state of affairs.

And so, two days before the opening, each critic received a special movie edition of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," profusely illustrated with scenes from the new picture. That's what you might call teaching your critics how to criticize.

And speaking of super-movie openings reminds me of the dodges used by the gentlemen in charge. Should you attend one of these premieres you will perhaps be properly and certainly be flattered as you pass through a lane, lined with awe-struck, eager-eyed movie fans. They have no tickets; they are just waiting to see the stars go in. And believe me, no opening would be worth while without the lowly aids to the proper atmosphere. Now I learn that these are not voluntary star gazers. On the contrary they are hired for the night, to stand there with that look of awe on their faces, thus making the third assistant movie critic of the Mt. Vernon Claret and just a little more important than Adolph Zukor.

And did you hear the story about the man who was waiting for a friend in the lobby, at one of these events? No. Well, while waiting, he was surprised to find a photographer focusing his camera and taking flashlights of him at two minute intervals. Evidently, he thought, the photographer had mistaken him for one of the visiting great.

"Here, here, my man," he said, "think you're making a mistake. I'm not the man you think you're photographing."

"I don't care who you are," the camera man replied. "I'm being paid to take a picture with a flashlight every two minutes and that's what I'm going to keep on doing. Get in the picture or get out of the way."

And so saying he shot another flashlight.

"So what do you want?" is current Broadway repartee used as a biting comment on a pointless story.

Shipboard Impressions

I have always supposed that old, seasoned travelers would be somewhat patronizing toward a young fellow from the country setting out on his first trip across the Atlantic. But instead they show me only envy.

"You're lucky," they say, "to have the thrill of your first glimpse of Europe still coming to you. Never again can you hope to get the same kick out of it."

Few people, even those who easily become seaship, regard a sea voyage as a hardship. Nearly everybody seems to think that it's a great privilege to spend several days staring at the ocean. But I don't yet share such enthusiasm. I've never cared much for bodies of water in the larger sizes and I particularly dislike oceans. Maybe that's why I have dilly-dallied so long about getting to the actual question of crossing one. A small trout pond or a babbling brook is my idea of a suitable place for marine adventure. The ocean is too uncompromising. Has anybody ever heard of an ocean growing conciliatory in an emergency and offering to make terms? It's a monster, bound to have its own way and ready to take any advantage. The more I look at the ocean as we pull away from New York harbor, the more I feel that if any trouble arises, I can't count on much help from the ocean. I'll be

BY MRS. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

The Value of the Magnifying Mirror to Beauty

Sometimes I think that women would be twice as beautiful if they used mirrors that made them look twice as large. For in proportion as your defects are shown up, you increase your efforts to overcome them.

Fewish girls who have blackheads would get mirrors that magnify threefold, so that they would lose no time in banishing the unsightly and harmful blemishes.

A woman approaching middle age should watch herself closely in a magnifying mirror and as soon as she sees the first evidence of fine lines, should hasten to eradicate them before they grow into wrinkles. Similarly, she should carefully guard her contour against the droop. A mirror that accentuates your beauty faults magnifies your attention as well and makes you quicker to remedy them.

One particular magnifying mirror that is invaluable for beauty is the dental mirror. I advise every woman to have one of these in order that she may keep a close watch of her teeth and catch any cavity or trace of pyorrhea at the very start.

In my talks so far this week, I have spoken about different kinds of mirrors and how they can aid your beauty. Tomorrow I am going to tell you how to "Let One Mirror Aid the Other."

very start. It is also possible to see discolorations, especially the line along close to the gum, which might go unnoticed in an ordinary mirror but are nevertheless giving you an appearance of untidiness and causing harm to your teeth. A dental mirror will save you pain, money and teeth.

Good teeth are especially important to beauty, for a woman's greatest charm should be her smile. How often I have seen a girl who was very attractive until she opened her mouth and then her teeth became visible they completely ruined the picture. And remember, no matter how fine a set of false teeth you can get, it will never take the place of your own from a beauty point of view. False teeth can never put back the roots into the gums and fill out the open spaces. When your own natural teeth are gone, there is bound to be a certain amount of depression in the gums which gives the face an old look.

In my talks so far this week, I have spoken about different kinds of mirrors and how they can aid your beauty. Tomorrow I am going to tell you how to "Let One Mirror Aid the Other."

Today's Recipes.

Cheese Hashlet with Beans—One can tomato soup, one package snappy cheese, one can black kidney beans. Mix, heat, add one egg. Serve hot on toast.

Baked Ham and Potatoes—Cover the bottom of a baking dish with sliced potatoes. Sprinkle with a little flour, salt, pepper. Place on top of potatoes a fairly thick slice of ham, stick with cloves, sprinkle with brown sugar, cover with milk and bake in moderate oven one hour.

Thousand Island Dressing—A delicious and easy dressing is made by adding India relish and catsup to plain mayonnaise.

Crisp Apple Scallop—Pare, core and slice six apples. Place in a greased casserole and cover with a mixture of one-half cup water, one-fourth teaspoon cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoon nutmeg, one teaspoon lemon juice. Work together with fingertips until crumblike in consistency; flour, one-half cup butter. Spread over apples and bake uncovered in moderate oven for 30 minutes. Serve with whipped cream.

just as well satisfied when we separate once more.

We're starting out in a fog. But none of the passengers appear much concerned. They seem willing enough to put up with fogs if only there is no rough sea. A ship officer chuckles good-humoredly at this.

"No sailor ever feels the slightest concern about rough sea," he says "but none of us has any peace of mind in a fog. The captain doesn't always stay on the bridge in a mere storm, but you may rest assured that he's there now and will be until this fog lifts."

Most of us are always more excited about imaginary than about real dangers.

It is disappointing that the departure of a great ship isn't more dramatized. Those who come to say farewell to their friends gradually disappear, the gangplank is withdrawn and the ship without the slightest hubbub simply starts across the ocean. No stirring announcement marks the exact moment of sailing. (Funny how many out-of-date words still endure. We speak of a boat sailing and call its employees sailors even though it's a steamer, without one sail aboard.)

It seems as if the captain should appear in gay clothes, with bristling mustache, and megaphone the starting order while the ship band plays a stirring tune—something at least as dramatic as the fellow in advance of a circus parade hollering: "Hold your horses! The elephants are coming!"

I'd like to see what one of the Ringlings could do with a good ocean liner at sailing time.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—A purpose is to keep us in the fiction writer who wanted to portray the very mental and bodily type of a "big navy" member of congress couldn't find a better model than Representative Fred A. Britten of Illinois.

In the first place, that's just what Britten is—the biggest of the big ones.

Next after Chairman Thomas S. Butler, he's senior majority member of the house naval affairs committee, and for bigness of ideas, he throws even Butler into the shade.

All he wants is thirty new 10,000-ton cruisers, at 11 millions per cruiser, plus two new 32,500-ton aircraft carriers, at 35 millions per carrier, or 400 millions all told, in the next ten years.

That's more than all the other twenty members of the naval affairs committee, put together, have had the nerve to ask yet.

Britten's a large man, in the prime of life and, obviously, the acme of physical trim—an athlete and amateur boxer of renown. Undoubtedly he could take on any two rival members of congress—not even barring Battling Tom Blanton from the list—and knock 'em into a cocked hat at the same time.

Jovial of voice and manner, nevertheless he speaks with a voice of authority, acquired, perhaps, in his calling as a building contractor. For Britten's none of your puny lawyers—his business is out of doors.

A student?—no, you wouldn't pick him for that. But force, vitality, pep!—he radiates all all three. A man of action!—all through.

In short, he was made to order for a "big navy man."

Chicago, with her "git thar" ways, is an appropriate city for him to hail from—as he does.

That England has outbuilt the United States in the cruiser class of fighting ships, since the 5-powers' naval limitation treaty was signed in 1922, irks Britten sorely.

He's determined we must catch up, and then get in the lead, building at the hottest clip we can.

Won't it simply start another naval race?

You can see by the Chicago congressman's expression that he doesn't care a hoot if it does, but his opinion is that the British will be better advised.

Then he doesn't believe their purpose is to keep us in the rear?

"Oh yes," says Britten, "if they can. But they know when to stop. There's a point—"

He patted his wallet pocket meaningly.

"War between the great English-speaking peoples," (guess whether this is going to be original) quoth the congressman. "Is unthinkable."

"Unthinkable!"—with much emphasis.

"At the same time," as an evident afterthought, "you never can tell."

Congressman Britten isn't unmindful of the national importance of an adequate mercantile marine.

For each merchant vessel, up to certain size and speed requirements and with a framework adapted to the mounting of an 8-inch gun battery in an emergency, he's thinking of suggesting the offer of a $1,000,000 governmental bonus.

He fancies maybe that would take enough of the curse off the high cost of American shipbuilding to insure us a fleet equal to our peace time trading requirements and capable of giving as good an account of itself as the next man's as a naval supplement.

Reasonable?

"Auntie," said the little boy, reading from his story book, "you must be awful wicked."

"What makes you say that?" frowned his relative.

"Because this book says that the good die young."

Believe!

The young bride had promised to take care of Barbara, a neighbor's child, for the afternoon.

When tea was served, Barbara was given her milk in the "company china" cup along with the other guests. A sudden crash, and the new set was minus a cup.

The child looked down at the wreck, and then up at the hostess.

With her face wreathed in smiles and a little sigh of relief, she said: "Gracious, wasn't it lucky I drank all my milk before it happened."

The yellow race may dominate the world some day, but not as long as the white race gets too yellow to dominate it.—New Bedford Times.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

An Answer From One Who Confessed

Several times girls have written me about early indiscretions and asked whether they should confess when they met the ONE man. Better than any answer of mine is this letter from a woman who did confess.

I hope it may help both men and women to be more charitable toward each other and answer the question for some girl:

"Dear Broken Hearted lonely: I am impelled to write you after reading your story, because it is so much like my own. My mother had the old-fashioned, mistaken idea that it was not proper to talk of sex matters, even with her own daughters. As a result I had the same misfortune to which you refer. No one in our small town ever knew anything about it, but I worried about what I would do when the right man came along and whether he would forgive my mistake.

"About three years after this happened 'he' came, and we were so much in love that I never thought of anything but our plan. Then one day, shortly before our marriage, he made a remark that paved the way to a complete confession. He truly forgave me, and we are still sweethearts after being married 15 years. We have four lovely children and no one could be happier. So please don't be downhearted, but carry on and live down your mistake, for everything will turn out for the best. When the right man comes he will forgive your early mistake."

"HAPPY WIFE."

And if a man refuses to forgive you will know that he is not the "right" man, and he might be intolerant and unforgiving in other ways.

The young man who writes the following is in a predicament. Will the girl believe him if he tells what he knows of her friend?

"Last summer I went for a short time with a girl whom I learned to love, although I never told her of it. She is clean and fine and all that is best in women. However, she turned me down for a fellow she had gone with before. He is in most ways a poor excuse for a man, but I am sure she doesn't really know him. Although going steady with her, he sneaks out with other girls who have very doubtful reputations. He then keeps it covered by lying to her. I can hardly stand to see him make a fool of her. Should I tell her? If I did would she think it selfishness and jealousy? She knows I want to go back to her.

Central Plays Final Home Game Friday

The most determined week of practice this season for Central High School's football squad is under way this week as the Blue and White prepares confidently for victory in its final home game of the season.

The University of Dayton Preps is the opponent Friday afternoon and a defeat of the "Baby Flyers" will make the season a success, regardless of the outcome of other contests.

Determination to win Friday is written on the countenance of every member of the team and Coach

Victor Kolb is in a happier frame of mind as a result.

The Central High mentor is working to bring about some degree of perfection to the offense but is not neglecting the defensive as well.

The squad came through the Troy contest unscathed except for bruises and a general soreness and the local eleven will not be handicapped by injuries in the Preps game.

The Dayton school displayed strength in defeating Catholic High of Hamilton, last week, and must not be regarded lightly, but Xenia gridgers are hopeful victory will reward their efforts this weekend and insure at least an even break in the season's schedule of games.

Friday's contest will start promptly at 3 o'clock with competent officials in charge.

FIRST PICTURE OF SANTA THIS SEASON ON CHRISTMAS SEAL

Upon the 1927 Christmas Seal is printed the first authorized photograph of Santa Claus to appear this Christmas-tide. The jolly old gentleman seems hale and hearty as ever as he drives over a snow-covered landscape behind his speeding reindeer team.

Under the midnight blue of the sky the pines are spangled with icicles and against the white background of the trees shines the double-barred cross, the symbol of the international fight against tuberculosis.

In the back of Santa's green sleigh sacks filled with balls and dolls and bags and boxes are piled high. For with his other presents Santa Claus is bringing the good gift of sunshine, fresh air and food, doctors, nurses and sanatorium beds for hundreds who have contracted tuberculosis and are fighting a gallant battle for life and health. He is bringing protection against the disease to families gathered around fireplaces in humble cottages and splendid mansions. And he is bringing a promise of the day when the great white plague shall have become only a memory.

Fifty million Christmas Seals will be placed on sale in Ohio the morning after Thanksgiving. The quota of Greene County is 150,000 seals. Mrs. W. H. Finley, of Xenia, is the seal sale chairman of this county.

Grid Captains

HAL MCCREERY

Hal McCreery, center on the Stanford university football team, was elected captain of this year's eleven at a meeting of the players on October 12.

He is rated as one of the best defensive centers on the coast. This is his third season as a regular. Stanford went through last season without meeting defeat. They were tied, however, by Alabama on New Year's day.

MERCHANTS TO MEET OSBORN FORDS HERE

Encouraged by their overwhelming victory over Piqua last Sunday the Xenia Merchants will engage in strenuous practice every night this week in preparation for the scheduled game with the Osborn Fords at Washington Park Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Physically, the local eleven came through the Piqua contest in good condition and will not be handicapped by injuries Sunday.

The Osborn team formerly known as the Osborn Indians, is annually strong and should make things interesting for the Merchants Sunday.

XENIA YOUTH MAY PLAY WITH PREPS

Robert Shoup, son of Attorney and Mrs. Marcus Shoup, E. Main St., is a member of the University of Dayton Preps football squad, which comes to Xenia Friday for a game with Central High School.

Shoup, a junior at the Dayton prep school, may participate in the game as he has been working hard for a berth on the "Baby Flyers" eleven and has played in several games this season.

BOWLING

The Greene County Lumber Co. quintet strengthened its grip on second place in the Recreation League by defeating Lang Transfers two out of three games Tuesday night. Winners also established a new league record by amassing a three-game total of 2,844.

This exceeds by sixteen pins the former record held by the Fords, and established the preceding night.

The lumber company rolled games of 966, 977 and 901, losing the final game by fourteen pins.

Blackburn, anchor man for the winners, again broke into the spotlight by rolling an excellent three-game series of 642. He had games of 201, 240 and 201. W. C. Horner and Whitlington were tied with 540 each for the losers. Box score:

SIMISON DAMAGE TRIAL IS RESUMED

Trial of the $50,000 damage suit of John Simison, Dayton Ave., as administrator of the estate and father of Eleanor Simison, deceased, against the Pennsylvania Railroad, based on a grade crossing crash a year ago in which the plaintiff's daughter was killed instantly was begun Tuesday in United States District Court in Dayton, which resumed session, following a one-half day's recess, with Judge Smith Hickenlooper presiding.

Patrolmen Ed Craig and Charles Thompson and Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman, subpoenaed as witnesses in the case, testified at the opening session Tuesday.

Her Secret Beautifier

Miss C. Delano, Washington, writes: "About two years ago I was bothered a great deal with a muddy, sallow and pimply skin. I found I could cover the blemishes with cosmetics, but this was only a temporary relief. 'My druggist recommended your purely vegetable laxative, and suggested my trouble might be constipation. After taking a short while I noticed a wonderful difference. My complexion has improved, also headaches, indigestion and biliousness never bothered me any more."

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS Sold all druggists 25c and 75c red pkgs.

To Cure a Cold in One Day

THEY FINISH HOME SEASON

With eleven seniors playing their school gridiron after next week's last high school game of football against Springfield next week, Coach Vic Kolb of Central High finds some solace in the fact that his backfield will not be entirely riddled.

Two boys whom Coach Kolb expects to depend on next year are John Gibney, fullback and Bob Adair, quarterback, both of whom are juniors. Both of these lads have shown themselves to be able performers in their first year of regular varsity competition this year and they constitute a nucleus for the new offense Central's mentor must build up next year.

Buell, another junior, is a third man in the backfield and has proven so capable at one of the halves this season that he is being counted on rather heavily for next year. Captain Bob Morton, senior and halfback, will retire from the high Xenians will get their last chance to see the Blue and White eleven in action on the home field this season Friday, when they meet the University of Dayton Preps. The game will be called at 3 o'clock and competent officials have been engaged.

If the scene in the above picture is repeated at Cox Field Friday, Xenia will not be in such a bad way, as the picture shows Gibney and Adair in place kick formation, the favorite trick Kolb is using this year to add the point after touchdown. Adair is holding the ball and Gibney is the kicker.

NO "SILENT NIGHT"

CHICAGO, Nov. 16—Chicago radio fans today were singing "good-bye to silent night."

Following a meeting of officials of local broadcasting stations, spokesmen announced the practice of observing Monday night as "silent night" for the benefit of "long distance fans" would be discontinued and that starting the first of the week seven day programs would be furnished.

MAKE LIFE WORTH LIVING

Don't go around feeling tired, lacking energy and strength, because your kidney action is irregular or below normal. Use Foley's, a diuretic stimulant to the kidneys, and feel again the use of an active ache-free body, the return of health and vitality. Your Foley's diuretic are the only thing I ever got to do me any good," writes Samuel Brenner, Alexandria, Ind. Men and women everywhere use and recommend them. Sold Everywhere.

THE NICKEL YOU PUT DOWN FOR A HAVANA RIBBON MEANS SMOKE LUCK FROM THE FIRST PUFF. IT MEANS MILDNESS AND MELLOWNESS AND ALL-DAY SATISFACTION. IT MEANS YOU CAN KEEP RIGHT ON SMOKING HAVANA RIBBON CIGARS AND LIKE THEM BETTER ALL THE TIME. YOU'LL SAY, "HOW CAN THEY MAKE IT SO GOOD?"

Here's how. Havana Ribbon sold at more than a nickel for years. Men liked them. They sold like hot cakes by the million. Volume production brought the price down. That's the whole story. So drop in at the nearest cigar store armed with one nickel only. And get set for a real surprise.

We know what we like, don't we, Old Pipe!

PRINCE ALBERT, and plenty of it, huh? Well, we can justify that on any number of counts. It's more than mere preference. There are sound reasons for liking Prince Albert above anything else.

Take fragrance, for instance. P.A. has 'em all stopped there. Every time I open the tidy red tin, I get a brand-new thrill. A tobacco that smells like that would have to be good, if you ask me. Yes, Sir!

And then take taste. Every puff tells a man that P.A. is cool and refreshing, with a mellow-mildness that is a revelation. Mild, yes, but not wishy-washy. P.A.'s rich, full-bodied flavor balances its mildness and makes it a smoke!

But all the talk in the world won't do a man any good, unless he acts on it. A load of long-burning P.A. in the bowl of his pipe will tell him volumes—and in language he likes. It's the personal test that counts, after all. I don't believe I can add to that.

PRINCE ALBERT

—the national joy smoke!

HELD TO GRAND JURY ON ASSAULT CHARGE

James Carpenter, 37, tenant on the W. J. Dootes farm, Hook Road, was bound over to the grand jury under $300 bond on a charge of assault with intent to wound by R. O. Copsey, justice of the peace. Tuesday, Carpenter had pleaded guilty.

Following an attack upon his stepson, Raymond Angel Thursday, Carpenter was arrested by Sheriff Ohmer Tate and O. H. Cornwell, county road patrolman.

"Yes, I remember her," she said, and then asked sarcastically: "Has he been married? He has, hasn't he?" "You've noticed them, haven't you?"

She remembered how she had asked him questions about the small plain girl the day she had found her talking to him, and how he had refused to answer them. She remembered how jealous she had been that day—and she was jealous now in just the same way.

"She's a great friend of yours as well as the Jettersons, isn't she?" she asked, and Pat nodded. A man very often is as transparent as a sheet of glass to a woman—particularly if he happens to be in love with her, as Pat France was with Lily. And so she saw through him without half trying.

"You've been going around with her for a long time, haven't you?" she wanted to know. "You and she and the Jettersons must have had jolly times together—the four of you."

"We have," said Pat, miserably, and then came out with the whole truth, as if he were tired of being cross-questioned. "And I'd probably have married her if I hadn't happened to see you that rainy day in Albemarle street. . . . We'd been going around together for nearly two years—she and I."

"And have you gone around with her much since then?"

Pat shook his handsome head, with its crisp waves of unruly hair. "I've never telephoned her since, or made a date with her," he answered, huskily. "That's how she happened to come down town to see me that day when you saw us. . . . She wondered what was the matter with me. Thought I must be sick or dead or something. I'd forgotten all about her, to tell the truth."

Lily studied him with narrowed eyes as he broke a roll in two, buttered it and ate it hungrily. "Would you go back to her if I married Staley Drummond?"

Pat shook his head. "No, I wouldn't; but you're going to marry Drummond right enough," he said bitterly. "It's the thing for you to do, and you know it—just as I know it."

"Do you want me to?" Lily sat down on the grass beside him and put her warm, flushed cheek against his and her arms around him. She was perfectly frank and unashamed in her love for him.

And then he turned suddenly and seized her in his arms, holding her so close that it was hard for her to breathe. He kissed her and kissed her again.

He stopped for a second—long enough to murmur: "This is how I want you to marry him!" Then he kissed her again with rough tenderness all over her face and her hair and her neck, and Lily lay back in his arms and thought of Staley Drummond's kisses and how cold they had left her, always.

"I can't marry him, Pat—not if you want me," she said when he had let her go, and they sat looking at each other, their hands clasped on the fresh young grass that spread around them in a carpet of living green.

"You can marry me, either. I can see that—more plainly now than ever before," Pat told her after a long pause. "No matter how much we care about each other, Lily, there are things that would always keep us from being happy."

"What?"

Pat laughed. Well, things like Staley Jetterson's clothes. You don't like the way she dresses, and so you call her terrible and wild-looking. But to me, Staley Jetterson is the salt of the earth. . . . She's a wonderful housekeeper, she's crazy about her husband and her children, she has the most hospitable house you ever saw. It's a sort of second home to me. And the Jettersons are people you'd have to see lots of if you were married to me."

Lily kicked at the grass with the heel of her pink-and-white slippers.

"I shouldn't have said what I did about the woman. She's probably just as nice as you say she is. . . . And Pat, you talk as if I were a snob. I'm not. I fell in love about a year ago with a chauffeur's uniform. I'm in love with you now when you're in a chauffeur's uniform that my mother bought for me, and I'd love you just the same if you were in a convict's stripes!"

Pat took out his little French brief pencil and began to fill it. He stared down into the bowl as if he were a sand-digger reading the future in its tobacco-scented depths.

"Yeah," he remarked, slowly and thoughtfully, "but after we'd been married for a while, and all the glamour was gone from me, how would you like being married to a poor mechanic who worked all day in Roy Jetterson's garage, tinkering at cars and touring cars and came home at night with grease on his overalls and under his nails? Who couldn't take you anywhere but to the picture show or over to the Jettersons to play cards? . . . Staley Drummond and his cars and that big house of his would look pretty slick to you then, eh, Sister?"

"It would not, and don't call me 'Sister,'" said Lily, "because I'll never be a sister to you. I'm going to marry you, Pat or know the reason why?"

"I'll have to have something to

CHAPTER XV
Pat grinned sheepishly, and actually blushed as he began to open a tin of sardines with his pen knife. He kept his eyes on it as he answered Lily's question. "Why, I don't know how to tell you who Elizabeth Ertz is. She's just—Elizabeth Ertz," he said awkwardly. She's a trained nurse and a great friend of Staley Jetterson's. An awfully nice, sensible sort of girl."

"Yes, but that's not what I want to know," Lily fixed him with her large, luminous gray eyes. "What I want to know is how she knows enough about me to talk me over with those Pettersons. She's never seen me—she doesn't know me!"

"She's seen you," said Pat, pouring coffee from the thermos bottle into two cups. "You remember a girl who was talking to me one day when you came up to me? A short little girl with big blue eyes?"

Lily nodded, her hair, like a golden plume in the sun that came sifting down through the new green leaves above them.

"Yes, I remember her," she said, and then asked sarcastically: "Has he been married? He has, hasn't he?" "You've noticed them, haven't you?"

She remembered how she had asked him questions about the small plain girl the day she had found her talking to him, and how he had refused to answer them. She remembered how jealous she had been that day—and she was jealous now in just the same way.

"She's a great friend of yours as well as the Jettersons, isn't she?" she asked, and Pat nodded. A man very often is as transparent as a sheet of glass to a woman—particularly if he happens to be in love with her, as Pat France was with Lily. And so she saw through him without half trying.

"You've been going around with her for a long time, haven't you?" she wanted to know. "You and she and the Jettersons must have had jolly times together—the four of you."

"We have," said Pat, miserably, and then came out with the whole truth, as if he were tired of being cross-questioned. "And I'd probably have married her if I hadn't happened to see you that rainy day in Albemarle street. . . . We'd been going around together for nearly two years—she and I."

"And have you gone around with her much since then?"

Pat shook his handsome head, with its crisp waves of unruly hair. "I've never telephoned her since, or made a date with her," he answered, huskily. "That's how she happened to come down town to see me that day when you saw us. . . . She wondered what was the matter with me. Thought I must be sick or dead or something. "It would not, and don't call me 'Sister,'" said Lily, "because I'll never be a sister to you. I'm going to marry you, Pat or know the reason why?"

"I'll have to have something to gloomily. "I didn't see myself letting you in for a load of unhappiness, and that's what I would be doing if I let you give Drummond the go-by and marry me. . . . I like a dog, as it is, coming out here and making love to a girl who's all ready to marry the man she ought to marry."

He began to stack together the plates and cups that he had used and to fold up the tablecloth. He packed up the hamper and put it back into the automobile. He found a piece of old newspaper in a corner of the snake-fence near them and used it to start a little fire. In it he burned up the eggshells and crusts of bread and other remnants of their little feast.

Lily watched him idly. It never occurred to her to help him; she was so used to having people scurry around waiting on her. She took a cigarette from the pink case that matched her dress and asked him for a light.

"All right—catch!" Pat said and tossed her a box of safety matches that he took from his pocket. Then he went on stamping out his tiny bonfire.

Lily struck a light from the box. "I'm used to having men light my cigarettes for me, I don't mind telling you," she drawled. "Instead of throwing a box of matches at me as if I were a tennis net or something like that?"

"Sure, I know you are," he admitted. "You're used to men who know all the nice things to do for women—and I don't know them. I've been too busy making a living all my life to learn all the frills, and I'd just drive you wild with my lack of politeness all the time, if we were married. . . . Another thing, I think you ought to do some things for yourself. You're lazy. Do you know it? You could see I was busy here with this fire. Why shouldn't you light your own cigarette, after all? I don't like to see you smoke them, by the way."

Lily raised her very beautifully arched eyebrows. She got up from the grass, shaking out her skirts.

"Let's go home, Pat," she said. "Perhaps you're right. . . . There are lots of things we see from entirely different viewpoints, aren't there? But there's no use in quarreling about them."

They got into the car and headed for home.

"I suppose two people from two different walks of life have married before now, and lived very happily," Lily said, sitting close to him with her hands locked on his shoulder, as she looked up at him. "If two people loved each other enough, little things like cigarette smoking or pink stockings or black dresses wouldn't make a difference. They'd get along somehow, without much friction no matter what arguments came up—"

She stopped, let out a little air, and turned in her seat to look back at a car that had just passed them on the other side of the road.

"Ye gods! That was Mother and Mrs. Cain!" she cried. "And I saw us. She saw me sitting here with my head all but on your shoulder! Up here in the front seat! Good grief!"

Pat smiled. "What if she did?" he asked. "She knows you and I took the car and the picnic basket away. You can bet that Carrie told her everything about us that she could think of. . . . And, anyway, where's your courage? An hour or two ago you were ready to marry me today and let the rest of the world go by, Lily."

Lily climbed back into the rear seat. "Yes, and I'd do it now," she declared firmly. "But I'm not going to be scolded and questioned and lectured about you around the house. Either I marry you and get away or I stay here and behave myself, from now on."

"I'm leaving on Saturday, anyway," Pat said. "So I won't be helping you to misbehave very much longer. I'm going to break the glad news to your mother this afternoon."

The skies darkened for Lily as he spoke. . . . He was going away on Saturday, and there would be nothing ahead of her but Staley Drummond and marriage for years and years on top of years.

They turned into the driveway, and she left him, without a word, at the front steps, and went into the house.

From the rear window of the upstairs hall she watched him put the car into the garage, come out and sit down in the hammock couch on the grass in the back yard. He took out his little pipe and filled it again. She watched his finger as they moved. . . . She loved his strong, capable hands, with their round, straight fingers. She loved the way his shoulders curved under his coat, and the way his head was set on them. She knew that she loved everything about him as she never was going to love anyone again, no matter how long she lived.

She went into her own room, sighing as she went.

Carrie was cleaning it. A dust-pan lay in the middle of the floor and the contents of her dressing table drawers were piled on the bed. The drawers, themselves, had been washed and were standing on the balcony outside the front windows in the sun.

Carrie was leaning against the dresser, holding something in her hands, looking at it closely. Lily saw that it was Pat's identification card, with his picture upon it. "You give that to me!" she cried, and snatched it out of the maid's hands.

A sidelight on the falling stars of Hollywood and the ailing prices of their ability is given in the announcement of a demurrer filed by Francis X. Bushman, motion picture actor, to his wife's suit to collect $52,000 alimony allegedly due her, was overruled by the Superior Court this week.

Bushman in a recent statement, in his own defense, stated that the amount was awarded him by the court in a suit brought by Leo Loeb, who charged that a total of $114,412 had been awarded her under a divorce granted in Baltimore, Md., and that $52,000 of this was unpaid.

He was arrested Monday by Deputy Sheriff George Sugden and O. H. Cornwell, county road patrolman.

Acid Scalp

How many carefully coiffured heads can stand the test of eyes only inches away, and reveal not a speck of dandruff? How many women can warm to the dance, and know their hair will have no taint for the partner who holds them close?

No one can be sure who has acid scalp. If you even suspect this acid condition of the scalp, it is time for Danderine. This scientific preparation will neutralize any acidity; and dissolve all dandruff if there is any. And it always gives the hair itself a lovely softness and sheen. It will wash better, hold a wave longer, and behave better all the time if you just occasionally apply a few drops of Danderine. Try it! Every drugstore has this perfect conditioner of the scalp and hair, and a thirty-five cent bottle lasts for weeks.

GAS USED IN CHEMICAL WARFARE EXPLAINED TO KIWANIS CLUB

An attempt to explain the great misunderstanding concerning the use of gas in warfare, was made by Dr. C. S. Adams, professor of chemistry, Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Ohio, at the Kiwanis Club Tuesday evening, on the subject "Chemical Warfare and Poisonous Gas." Dr. Adams was connected with the research department of chemical warfare during the World War and has been gassed a number of times in his laboratory work.

"Gas is hard enough, but in comparison, it is not as bad as shot and shell," Dr. Adams told the club.

He reviewed the history of the discovery of fumes of any sort in the Greco-Turkish war and on down to the present day, the Germans being the first to use it in the late war. "The Allies retaliated in kind as soon as they could produce."

"The Germans used first great quantities of chlorine gas, which caused strangulation, which is horrible," he said. "But to prepared men the casualty list is comparatively negative. Before gas masks were perfected there was a 30 per cent casualty and after the gas mask one or two per cent. Not only that, but every one is prejudiced to anything new in any activity, especially warfare."

The speaker gave figures substantiating his contention that gas warfare for "prepared men" is less horrible than shot and shell.

Dr. Adams predicted that no matter what is done in the meanwhile, if there is another war, gases will be used to a large extent, because they are efficient, and can temporarily incapacitate the enemy without a large death list, and gain their ends. The death list from shot and shell is 24.85 per cent, while from gas is 75 per cent, he said. Those who are permanently disabled by shot and shell number one man in 40; for poison gas, one man in 200.

The speaker had samples of various gases and explained their use and effect. He took considerable time to make it clear that no gas had been found or could be found according to chemical knowledge of poisonous compounds that would eliminate a whole city by one bomb. Too many factors enter into question and no gas was discovered during the war which in any manner approximated any such destruction, he declared. He gave a vivid description of the activity of mustard gas, from which he had been poisoned several times.

He proved in closing that the development was towards the use of gas as more humane than shot and shell. A number of slides depicted the development of this branch of our war preparation.

Dr. Austin Patterson, W. R. Torrence and Theatrical White, were in charge of the meeting. Dr. Raymond McClellan gave a short talk on Christmas Seals urging all the men present to buy a large quota. He set forth the plans of the present committee on seals for next year.

RESERVED SEATS TO GO ON SALE FRIDAY

The high school and faculty enjoyed a merry evening at the school house last evening when the Randallians, winners in the Lecture Course ticket selling contest, were entertained by the Fudgerian and Dynamic Societies, at a poverty party. The program was interesting; two quartets sung by Betty Moorman, Lucille Bailey, Elliott Sutton and Floyd Badgley; a duet by Marjorie Toland and Carrie Sharp; a reading by Marjorie Toland and "Wit and Humor" by Loren Brock. Marjorie Moorman of the Randallian, Claire Gordon of the Fudgerian and Dwight Taylor of the Dynamic were each given a box of candy for holding the highest ticket selling record in their respective societies. Miss Margaret Gowdy, president of the Randallians, thanked the societies for the party. The menu, which did not indicate extreme poverty, was creamed chicken on hot biscuits, mashed potatoes and celery, fruit salad, water and cider.

Mrs. J. C. Ferguson, Mrs. Vernon Creamer entertained their bridge club Wednesday night at the home of the former. Besides the two members of the club, there was a guest table, Mrs. A. V. Whitehead, Mrs. Homer Smith, Mrs. R. C. Turnbull and Miss Mildred Toland. The P.T.A. met at the school house Friday afternoon. An Armistice Day and Thanksgiving program was given. "America the Beautiful" was sung and the Governor's proclamation was read by Miss Mildred Toland. Rev. L. J. Cook, of the Friends Church made an address and Miss Toland's room gave several numbers on the program. "America" was sung in closing.

Remove the Cause and You Remove the Pain

Nine-tenths of digestive troubles are caused by food fermentation and excess acid in the stomach, and is only by ending these conditions that permanent relief can be hoped for.

The quickest, safest, and surest way to do this is to take a little "Pape's Diapensin" after eating or whenever pain is felt. This not only stops fermentation and neutralizes excess acid, but exerts a soothing, healing and strengthening influence on the weakened stomach, and induces normal healthy digestion.

That is why millions everywhere recommend "Pape's Diapensin." Follow their sound advice, get a 60 cent package of "Pape's Diapensin" from your druggist at once, and insure stomach health, with the fear of indigestion banished forever.

HOW CAN WOMEN KEEP WELL ENOUGH TO GET UP SINGING?

MRS. BELLE THOMPSON
3101 E. 44TH ST., EAST LAKE, TENN.

Springtime streamed in through the open windows. The green fields of Georgia were basking in the sunshine. Somewhere a bird was trilling. It was a day to be happy.

But the pale woman at the table sighed and pushed away her plate. Nothing tasted right. She couldn't eat much. She couldn't sleep well, either. She was so weak. It was hard to do her work. When the baby cried, she wanted to cry, too.

She had not been well for four years. Her husband watched her with a man's helpless expression. But his mother knew a remedy.

"My mother-in-law," says Mrs. Belle Thompson, 3101 E. 44th St., East Lake, Tenn., "told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I took six bottles of the Vegetable Compound. I could sleep and would not get up in the morning aching and feeling fine. I am the mother of three children, and always after the babies came I had to take treatments, but I can truly say that this last time I have only used the Sanative Wash. It does more good than the treatments. It keeps me on my feet to care for my children, and I do most of my work. I feel it my duty to let you know how both of the medicines have helped me."

Another Happy Woman

"I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the little books you give away and began to take the medicine. After the first few bottles I began to feel better and could eat better and had fewer headaches. I feel like a different person. At anytime that I don't feel good I take the Vegetable Compound again, as I always keep a bottle on hand. You may use this letter for every word is true. I will answer any letters sent to me."—Mrs. Jennie Bullman, 611-11th St., Union City, N. J.

This dependable medicine has been in use for over fifty years.

EX-XENIA TEACHER GETS PROMOTION

Pliny H. Powers, former member of the Central High School faculty, and son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. John Dymond, this city, has been transferred from the principalship of the John Adams High School, Cleveland to a similar position at Cleveland East High Tech School, considered one of the best positions in the Cleveland school system.

Prof. Powers is a graduate of Wilmington High School and Wilmington College. He also attended Miami University and Teachers College of Columbia University, receiving a master's degree from the latter.

He began his teaching career as assistant principal of Central High School, then became principal at Paulding and went to Cleveland in 1918 as principal of Rawlings Junior High. He has been principal of John Adams since the opening of that school in 1923.

Cascara is Your Doctor's Choice

When physicians pronounce cascara the PERFECT laxative—why experiment with things that lash the system into action? Cascara, you know, is the bark of a tree. A natural and normal stimulus to the bowels.

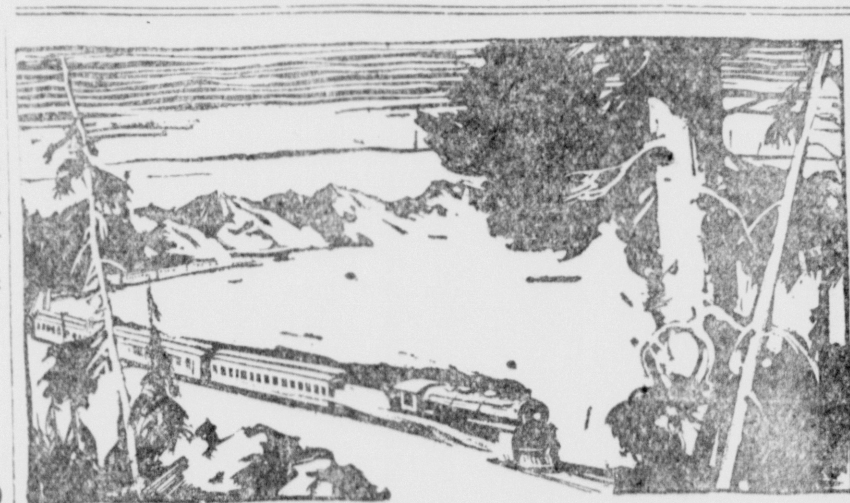

The Indians, who used to chew this bark, had no word in their language that meant "constipation!"

Perfect regularity is possible to day, and to all of us. We have cascara in ideal form: the very delectable-tasting, candy cascara gives us pure cascara. It has helped at least a million people to habitual regularity. Millions of others, unfortunately have stuck to their own ideas.

A modern druggist must stock many laxatives, but for your own good the druggist would rather have you ask for the inexpensive little box of cascara than anything else.
